Our National Capital Happenings!

[Special correspondence DAILY NEWS.]

WASHINGTON, March 30, 1891.

The President is not a man easy to take offense, nor is he given to implying improper motives to men, who, for political reasons make a practice of misrepresenting everything that he or any member of his administration does, but he is an ordinary human being, and as such resents the outright manufacture of stories for the express purpose of making, or rather trying to make misunderstanding between himself and other republican leaders. Therefore it is only natural that he should be somewhat offended at the publication of a new-paper article intimating that he and Major McKinley are rivals for the presidential nomination next year, and purporting to state upon authority that Maj. McKinley was already actively working against the re-nomination of Mr. Harrison and for his own nomination, and further, that Maj. McKinley claimed the nomination as a right, because he was the author of the tariff act passed by the Fifty-first Congress.

The story was a bundle of misstatements from the beginning to the end, and the object of its democratic authors easily discernable, as, in order to make it appear more plausible and as eminating from a republican source it is based upon the assumed certainty of the nomination and election of Maj. McKinley as governor of Ohio this fall. That such will be the case is the general belief and hope of all republicans hereabouts, but the object of the writer of the story was to prevent the very thing that he assumed to be certain to occur. He hoped to create dissention among the Ohio republicans by making it appear that Maj. McKinley's election as Governor would be covertly opposed by the President.

This democratic would-be mischief maker well knew that Maj. McKinley was out of this city and that his story would get well circulated before there would be an opportunity to deny it. Now, as a matter of fact, I happen to know that the President is particularly desirous of seeing Maj. McKinley nominated for Governor of Ohio, and that he proposes doing everything that he may with propriety do to help elect the champion of protection after he is nominated, and I also know that Maj. McKinley is fully aware of these sentiments of Mr. Harrison, and that he is equally as friendly towards Mr. Harrison. It is evident, however, that the democrats propose to keep up their old time tactics of trying to make political capital for their own party by attempting to create dissention among the friends of prominent republicans; therefore the republicans should be constantly on their guard and place no credence in stories of alleged quarrels or "strained relations" between eminent republicans. The republican party, as represented in Congress and in the administration, is to-day clearer of factions than it has been at any time for fifteen years past.

Secretary Foster has exploded another democratic "Roorback." It was stated that the Treasury Department was greatly embarrassed to know where the money was to come from to redeem the $50,000,000 of 4½ per cent. bonds that will mature next September. This statement caused the new Secretary to smile when his attention was called to it. The holders of these bonds need not wait until next September, as the treasury department is ready now to redeem them as fast as presented, paying the full interest to date of maturity. That's how embarrassed it is. The embarrassment is all in the minds of the democratic newspaper writers who are compelled to furnish sensational political matter at all times, even if it has to be entirely manufactured, as this was.

The return of the special train which carried the remains of the late Senator Hearst and the accompanying Congressional committee to San Francisco has been the signal for a revival of all the gossip of several years past regarding extravagant congressional funerals. There is no doubt that these funerals have cost more money than they should have cost, nor is there any doubt that a reform is needed, but the man who can believe that they have been the pleasure junkets that some imaginative writers have described must rate the congressmen who have attended them as a grade lower than brutes, and I, being reasonably familiar with the characters of the Senators and Representatives, cannot do it.

There was a rumor here a day or two ago that the Canadian government, under instructions from Great Britain, had requested Attorney-General Miller to agree to the withdrawal of the Sayard case (Behring Seal) from the cognizance of the Supreme Court, in view of the negotiation for arbitration; but it is denied at the department of Justice. It has not been fully decided what country will act as the arbitrator, but it is believed that Switzerland will be chosen. The President's annual proclamation of warning to illegible sealers may contain a surprise for some people.

An Accommodating Gentleman

Some of the residents of Howard and Spring streets have been considerably troubled of late by a certain young man ringing their door bells then running away. One family endured the nuisance as long as possible then the man of the house set himself to watch to find out who the ringer was. One day recently the man was discovered and identified and as a hint to him to desist the family man wrote him a letter in which he told him that, if it was all the same to him, he would like if he would give them notice a half hour or so before he got his "spells" then his wife would not need run to the door only to see a coat tail go around the corner; also, if it was just as convenient to him, he would like if he would call in the afternoon when the baby wasn't asleep. And finally, if all this wouldn't suit him, he would be willing to buy him a bell that he could take home and ring it just whenever he got a "spell." It is needless to say that since the sending of the letter that man's door bell has been left severely alone.

IF claims will win the speakership fight Mills will have a walk over, but most people have an idea that it is votes and not wild claims that will settle the business. Mr. Mills has a corner on "claims," but how he is fixed with votes remains to be seen. As Mills would make about as unfit a Speaker as it would be possible to select we trust that the democrats will elect him. His occupancy of the Speakers chair would make thousands of republican votes.

THE rousing receptions given Maj. McKinley every where he goes are an indication that the people are beginning to understand the benefits of the tariff bill bearing his name, which was so unblushingly lied about last fall.

RECIPROCITY is such a good thing that the nations of the earth are all howling for it, and Uncle Sam can leisurely take his choice.

BY TELEGRAPH!

WILL IT BE WAR?

The morning dispatches state that the Italian Minister has been withdrawn from Washington and will shortly return to his home in Rome. This action is taken because of the trouble at New Orleans. Italy may resort to war but if she does she will have to come over here to get it and then her army wouldn't amount to a pinch of snuff. All the same there is considerable excitement in Washington over the present condition of the affair.

The Nicelys Will Hang

HARRISBURG, March 31.—No action has yet been taken in the case of the Nicely brothers, although numerous friends and relatives have been sending the Governor very earnest letters in behalf the prisoners. It is the impression here that the State will not interfere at all in this case, and that the death sentence will be carried out on Thursday.

After Many Years

WILLIAMSPORT, March 20.—A strange story is told by William Streebs, who said that he ran away from his home when 7 years old, and from that time to the present, about 50 years, he had not seen his mother. After several years he went to Denver, where he is now the owner of a large sash and blind factory.

During all the time he had not forgotten his mother, whom he believes to be still living, and he determined, if possible, to learn her whereabouts. He commenced to advertise where he had heard of her last, and his efforts were finally crowned with success. He was informed that she had moved to a place called Jersey Shore, in Pennsylvania, and a letter to her in that place brought the glad tidings that she was alive. He is now on his way to see her.

ADULT catechism: Which is the richest and most prosperous country?

The United States.

In which country is wealth the most widely diffused among the people?

The United States.

What are the principal causes of this prosperity and the generally diffused wealth among all classes?

A protective tariff and a sound and stable currency.

Who gave the country these blessings?

The Republican party.

BEWARE of the man who is continually talking against "sentiment." Sentiment rules the world, and without it men and women would still be living as savages. The person whose nature is without sentiment are deserving of pity rather than execration, for they are shut out from the sweetest things of this life, not to mention the hereafter.

THERE is no discount on the Americanism of Bishop Keane. He says this country is not only the grandest organization of popular institutions, but it is also the best embodiment of human fraternity and of Christian civilization which the world has yet seen. And the bishop isn't a candidate for office.

IF this government isn't the best in the world, particularly for those compelled to work for a livelihood, why is it that the working people of Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba, and Hawaii are so anxious to see their countries admitted to the United States?

Not Necessarily.

Personal Pencilings.

Mr. Fred Jackson is ill with the grip.

Mrs. Alice Taylor is visiting her sister in Altoona.

Mr. Cyrus Wasson, of Lemont, was in Bellefonte Tuesday.

Major W. F. Reynolds is in Philadelphia on a business trip.

Mr. Ed. Irvin and his sister, of Juljan, were in town Monday.

Rev. J. A. Woodcock and family are now stopping in Bellefonte.

Mrs. James McKee spent Easter with her parents near State College.

Mr. Samuel Nevling, of this place, spent Friday with friends in Tyrone

Mrs. Hammond Sechler is visiting at the home of her parents near Oak Hall.

Mr. David Krape, of Fiedler, transacted business in Bellefonte on Tuesday.

George Kaup and son, of Boalsburg, transacted business in Bellefonte on Monday.

Miss Mame Zellers, of Lock Haven, is visiting her uncle, Mr. William Zellers, on Allegheny street.

Dr. and Mrs. Stein and their son Jack, of Harrisburg, are the guests of Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Houck.

Misses Bessie and Rhae Green, of Fillmore, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gray, on East Linn street.

Miss Bessie Sommerville, of Winburne, Clearfield county, is visiting Mrs. James Potter in this place.

Mr. C. H. Pearson, of the American Press Association, New York, was in Bellefonte on Friday night.

Mr. Isaac Maitland departed for his home in Williamsport on Monday. Mrs. Maitland remained in Bellefonte.

Louis Bagnarelli, the little Italian who took a trip to Italy to see his parents, returned to Bellefonte Tuesday morning.

Messrs. George W. and Robert H. Ellenberger, two brothers of Marengo, this county, were in Bellefonte Monday.

Misses Helen Hastings and Helen Malin, of this place, spent Easter with their young friend, Miss Lulu Brew, in Tyrone.

Associate Judge Riley and ex-Sheriff Cooke went to Philipsburg on Monday evening to see about their coal land speculation.

Mr. Hunter Knicely and family are moving from the Blanchard house on East Lamb to a house further east on said street.

Miss Belle Brisbin, of Winnibego, Ill., passed through Bellefonte on Friday on her way to spend some time with friends at Centre Hall.

Mrs. Martin Haines, who with her two children, have been visiting relatives in Bellefonte departed for their home at Mt. Eagle Tuesday.

The funeral of J. F. VanValzah, who died in Tyrone on Wednesday morning, will take place from his late residence to-morrow morning at 8.30 o'clock.

Miss Annie Macbride departed on Tuesday afternoon 5.20 train for Harrisburg, where she will visit friends. Her sister, Miss Grace Macbride, is now visiting friends in Altoona.

Miss Annie Cleaver, who was ill with a sore throat during the past week, has sufficiently recovered to again be at her post of duty in the Fountain office, and now the readers of that journal can look for an unusually bright number next Saturday.

Ex-Commissioner John D. Decker spent Monday night in Bellefonte having driven from his home in the mountains to this place. Mr. Decker was surprised when he came to town to see how little snow there was around here; he said they had enough over there to last until harvest, if the weather remained as it now is.

EASTER SERVICES.

CHURCHES CROWDED AND GOOD MUSIC PREDOMINATED.

It was impossible for one person to attend all the churches on Sunday and it was hard to make a selection of which ones to attend as they all had specially prepared and elaborate easter services. And just as impossible as it was to attend all the churches is it impossible for us to tell, in our limited space, all the glories of the different services as rendered. Music, however, seemed to be the predominating feature everywhere.

A DAILY NEWS representative attended the early morning service in the Catholic church, and must be admitted that credit belongs to this congregation for the most elaborate preparations and Easter services of any of the churches. The decorations were superb and the music simply grand. The morning service in the Episcopal church deserves special mention. The choir of that church rendered to perfection some of the finest kind of sacred music, all appropriate to Easter day. Communion services were held in most all the churches in the morning.

In the evening the Presbyterian church was filled with persons anxious to hear the service of song to be rendered at that place. The Presbyterian church choir is now one of the best in Bellefonte and their rendition of the beautiful, though difficult, Easter hymns on Sunday evening, was above criticism. The singing of the Misses Aiken, Mrs. Mann, Miss Bayard, Messrs. Blanchard and Voris is deserving of more than a passing notice, while the playing of Mrs. Bonbright cannot be too highly complimented. Always a perfect performer yet on Sunday night it seemed as if the organ pealed forth words instead of notes and that, under the proficient manipulation of the skillful performer the organ had become a living, breathing being instead of an inanimate instrument. The evening services in the Reformed church were also said to be very enjoyable. Also both services in the Methodist and Lutheran churches, while the A. M. E. church held specially prepared services in a finely decorated building.

IT was bound to come. A democratic paper charges that the administration is responsible for the existance of the "Mafia" at New Orleans and for the recent occurrences in connection therewith. There is about as much foundation for this as for the average charge made by the democratic press.

The Quarto Centennial.

At the special meeting of Gregg Post on Monday evening committee's were appointed to arrange a program of exercises for the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the G. A. R. on next Monday evening.

MAJ. MCKINLEY in a recent speech stated the tariff situation in four lines as well as it could be done in four columns. He said: "Nothing I can say of the new tariff can help it. Nothing its enemies say can hinder it. Its operations alone can do it hurt."

Mr. Robert Gardner, of Rock Springs, was in Bellefonte Friday and called at this office. Mr. Gardner is one of the representative citizens of that locality but the good people up there will soon lose him as on next Tuesday he and his family will move to Tyrone.

MR. CLEVELAND has written another letter. This time he gives the farmers a little "taffy," but American farmers are too shrewd to be caught by such chaff.

THE news from North Carolina indicates that the moonshiners are closely allied to the "Mafia," and quite as ready to murder officers of the law.

What the Dude'll Do.

MR. EDITOR.—There is a young dude in Central City whose career was brought to a close on Saturday by a young lady giving him the cold shoulder. On Monday morning his mother called him to breakfast, then his wrath began to brew. He turned the bed up side down and tore things up in general. After that he proceeded to wreak his vengeance on his two younger brothers, giving them a severe beating and tearing the table cloth off the table and breaking some of the dishes. He raved and tore and swore all day and was unable to find a balm for his wounded affections until at last, by a desperate act, he purchased a ticket to Lock Haven and returned with one gallon of good rot gut whiskey. On his arrival at home he went to the cupboard and got a glass, sat down in front of his young sister and mother and drank until he could not get off his chair. He is the oldest boy in the family and is looked to to help support the family, but has turned his footsteps the other way. He is now setting a bad example to his younger brothers. His parents are of the most respectable in the town. SIGNUS.

High School Exercises.

Following is the programme of exercises rendered at the High School on Monday afternoon:

Dec.—"Two Tollar," John Bower (92); Essay—"Inventions," Roland Curtin (92); Dec.—"The Dutchman's dog," Thomas Brew (93); Dec.—"National Flag," Mac Curtin (94); Dec.—"Loafing," Joel Fauble (93); Essay—"John Whittaker," Sadie Bayard (93); Rec.—"Somebody's Darling," Ina Davidson (94); Essay—"Glass," Alice Dorworth (92); Dec.—"Washington," Harry Gerberich (92); Essay—"Thomas Carlisle," May DeSylvia (94); Rec—"The Irish Girl," Ella Gault (93); Essay—"Snow," Lida Gregg (94); Rec.—"Great Men," Laura Kellerman (94); Essay—"The Danube," Isabella Taylor (94); Rec.—"Advice to Girls," Emma Crider (94); Essay—"Belva Lockwood," Bella Hoover (92); Essay—"Yellowstone Park," Abbie Keller (94); Essay—"Starlight," Hannah Lehman (94); Dec.—"A Tramp," Charles Dorworth (93).

PRESENT indications are that the Parnell envoys will not collect enough money in America to pay their individual expenses. This is not because American sympathy for Ireland is waning, but because Americans refuse to endorse the dishonorable private acts of Mr. Parnell.

EX-SPEAKER REED has gone to Europe for a long vacation. He has earned a good rest and should take it in order to be prepared to worry the big democratic majority in the next House.

IF the democratic split in Chicago shall result in the election of a republican mayor of that city visitors to the World's Fair will have reason to be very thankful for its occurrence.

"UNCLE JERRY" RUSK believes in the right of American meat to fair treatment abroad, and the American people believe in "Uncle Jerry." Between the two beliefs it is dangerous for foreign governments to get.

As an explanation that doesn't explain Governor Nichol's letter to Mr. Blaine concerning the recent killing match at New Orleans is a great success.

A NEW YORK city official is indignant because somebody tried to bribe him. What's the trouble, wasn't the price offered high enough.

THERE is a growing impression that some of the Farmers Alliance members of the Fifty second Congress are talking too much.

LOVE WEEPING PLACED THIS SONG.

[ON A COPY OF THE ILIAD FOUND WITH THE MUMMY OF A YOUNG GIRL.]

Lo! an old song, yellow with centuries!
She, she who with her young dust kept it sweet;
She, in some green court on a carved seat,
Read it at dusk fair-paged upon her knees;
And, looking up, saw there, beyond the trees,
Tall Helen through the darkling shadows fleet:
And heard, out in the fading river-street,
The roar of battle like the roar of seas.

Love, weeping, placed this song when she was dead
In that sealed chamber, strange with nard and musk.
Outliving Egypt, see it here at last.
We touch its leaves; back rush the seasons sped:
For us, as once for her, in that old dusk,
Troy trembles like a reed before the blast!
—[Lizette Woodworth Reese, in Travelers' Record.

HE CONQUERED HER.

A PRETTY ROMANCE OF A HAUGHTY BELLE AND AN ARMY OFFICER.

"Ten to one you'll fall in love with her," said Fred Edgerly energetically.

"I won't take the wager. I don't want to rob you, Edgerly."

"You think you are proof against any amount of attractions after bearing assault and battery from West Point belles for five years and upward," Edgerly answered laughingly, as he glanced at the handsome bronzed face of his friend, as they drove over the high road leading from Carmen Station to Hurlton Top, where the two men were expected to join Mrs. Hurlton's gay party. "But you have not seen Miss Viner yet; when you do prepare to surrender unconditionally."

"You seem to forget that I am not an impressionable schoolboy," Lieutenant Fleetwell answered, with a scornful smile curling his lip under his heavy mustache. "I have seen hundreds of women handsomer and more charming than Miss Viner, I dare say, and I have escaped heart whole, fortunately," he added, with a sarcastic curl of the lip, which escaped his friend's notice.

"Fortunately! and why fortunately? Surely when a man is good looking, wealthy, and in the army he ought to marry and give hostages to fortune."

"Perhaps he ought, if he can," said Lieutenant Fletwell carelessly.

"If he can! That can't apply to you, Fleetwell. There is hardly a woman in five hundred who would refuse you."

"Is there not? Why?"

"Because you are rich and handsome, in the army, and—and eligible."

"Excellent reasons for a woman to marry me," said Lieutenant Fleetwell a trifle bitterly, "and equally excellent ones to keep me from matrimony," he added, as they turned in at the park gates and drove up the avenue leading to the old Hurlton mansion. It was a fine day, toward the latter part of September, bright and cheerful and sunshiny, and the grand, stately old brown stone building was looking its best in the haze of golden sunlight.

It was upward of five years since Lieutenant Fleetwell had seen his cousin's stately old mansion, and his handsome dark eyes brightened as they dwelt upon it, and brightened yet more as they fell upon a lady in a picturesque tea gown who came out on the wide stone steps with her eager hands outstretched and her dark eyes aglow with pleasure.

"My dear Jerome, how glad I am," she said, as Lieutenant Fleetwell took the little hands in his, and bending, kissed them with a graceful, Old World courtesy which was pleasant to see. "Frank is fishing, of course, but he will be back early. What an age it is since we met!"

"It is a long time indeed," Jerome answered in his low, rich voice, "but looking at you, Florence, I am inclined to think that it is five months, and not five years, which have elapsed since I went to West Point."

"Wait till you see my boys," she said, laughing, as she turned to greet the young collegian with pleasant, cordial courtesy — and the two gentlemen followed her into the hall, a stately apartment in keeping with the exterior of the mansion. "Most of my lady guests have driven over to Bamby's Head," Mrs. Hurlton said, as she led the way across the marble pavement toward one of the many doors which opened into the hall, "Miss Viner and I are alone. Mr. Edgerly, I have good news for you, Miss Dusan is coming tomorrow."

As she spoke she pushed open a door leading into a pretty, dainty, rather esthetic looking room, where tea was waiting, and which at first seemed to be unoccupied, but as the door opened a lady who was standing by the open window turned slowly around and came toward them, holding out her hand to Mr. Edgerly with a smile, which did not blind him to the sudden gleam of intense, eager admiration which flashed into Lieutenant Fleetwell's eyes as they rested upon her face.

She was very beautiful; there could hardly be two opinions upon that point. She was small, though queenlike, and her dress of some soft, cream colored material, which fell around her in soft folds, showed the beauty of a figure which was nothing less than perfect.

"Lieutenant Fleetwell—Miss Viner," said Mrs. Hurlton quietly, and Miss Viner bowed slightly, while the faintest tinge of pink rose in her fair face as she met Lieutenant Fleetwell's eager, dark, admiring eyes.

Hurlton Top was one of the very pleasantest houses in the county to stay at, for the hostess exercised the greatest discretion and judgment in the choice of her guests, and spared no pains to make their visit an enjoyable one. Mrs. Hurlton was, like many another happy wife, a matchmaker at heart.

It very soon became apparent to some of her lady visitors that their pretty hostess had designs against the peace of mind of her husband's cousin, and Fred Edgerly smiled to himself as he saw how hopelessly and irretrievably in love his friend had fallen with Miss Viner before many days had elapsed.

...p summer drifted into October. On smooth lake some little distance from the house, an idle boat with idle oars as floating down with the current. The moonlight played at will on the placid breast of the lake.

Such the picture had one been a mere spectator to the mimic scene—but to the two actors surroundings were lost sight of—they thought only of themselves.

Mocking the silver moon, when they glanced upward, they could see across the lake and through the trees the twinkling lights of Hurlton Top and hear the merry voices and gay laughter of the group on the bank from which they had just escaped. Arch smiles had passed between its members as they had seen Dorothy Viner and Jerome Fleetwell stroll off arm in arm to where the little boat was moored.

The women had almost ceased to be jealous of Dorothy—or to ask where lay her charm. When she exercised her fascinations men bowed before her—first from necessity, then from choice.

But, though her victims were countless, she was 24 and Dorothy Viner still. However, this time she had encountered (her little sister said) a foeman worthy of her steel. What she was among men, Jerome Fleetwood was among women. Therefore, seeing these two brought beneath the same roof and thrown into daily intercourse, rumor was rife, and speculation awaited results with bated breath. Meanwhile the little boat floated calmly on the surface of the lake.

"Miss Viner!—Dorothy!"

It was the first word either had uttered in full 10 minutes. She looked quickly up at the speaker. The white knit scarf thrown carelessly upon her dark hair, out from which peered the beautiful pale face, lent her some of the moon's mystic charm; but meeting the earnest gaze of the dark, magnetic eyes bent upon her, hers fell for an instant. Then, as though ashamed of the momentary weakness, again shot a questioning look into Lieutenant Fleetwell's face.

"Miss Viner," he repeated calmly, "did you know we were in danger?"

"In danger?"

The dreamy look faded from her face, the color deserted her cheeks and, shivering heavily, she glanced up at the blue vault where sailed so majestically the Goddess of Night—down into the dark depth of the waters, only to see the silvery moon's brilliancy reflected there, around, about her. All was peaceful.

"No," he said, in answer to her look, "not from any of these. The moon, the wind, the water—all are our friends tonight. We are in danger from each other."

Oh, how she prayed the moon might fail to make apparent the instant flushing of blood to ther cheek! She felt it glow like a warm, crimson rose, even while she raised her little head almost defiantly, as though to hurl a challenge at his audacity. Men had made love to her in many forms, but always as suppliants. This man dared to suppose her in equal danger with himself?

"You deal in riddles, Lieutenant Fleetwell," she returned coldly. "I am accustomed to plain speech."

"Rather say that plain speech is to you an unknown tongue, and that I am the first man who has dared to speak frankly. Would you have me speak plainer still? You shall have your wish. A week longer under the same roof with you, a week more of exposure to your fascinations and my ship would go to wreck and ruin on the bar; unless"— he leaned nearer, his voice grew softer, more full of tender feeling, and his hand fell on hers very lightly, but with caressing grace—"unless, Dorothy, you would let it float your pennon and guide it into the safe harbor of your love."

She had been wooed many times, in many climes, by many men, but nothing had ever moved her as this wooing, on this moonlight night in October. Yet this soldier—this man—dared tell her that in another week this all might come to pass.

Others had sworn to go from her presence to put an end to the existence she had rendered miserable, or had vowed that henceforth woman's smile would be gall and wormwood, or pleaded that she had shorn their manhood of its strength and rendered their life a burden.

This one did none of these things. While his strength yet was his he saw and met the danger.

"A week hence," she said to herself bitterly, "and the flame might singe him. Now his wings are all unscorched. He does not say: 'I love you!' 'In time I might love you!' Was he then to win so easy a victory? Never."

"Let us go home," she interrupted in a constrained voice. "It is growing chilly."

"Dorothy, is this my answer?"

"Your answer?" with an assumption of surprise. "I was not aware of any question."

"You shall not have even this excuse. Will you be my wife?"

His voice was hoarse and stern, and his grasp tightened on her hand.

"You hurt me, Lieutenant Fleetwell," she complained petulantly, making an effort to withdraw her fingers.

Instantly he released her.

"I see that I hurt you," he returned courteously, and took up the oars. "Pardon me," he continued, "I will not do it ever again."

A few bold strokes and the boat's keel grated on the shore. Ten minutes later and the two reappeared in Mrs. Hurlton's beautifully appointed salon. On the parterre beyond shone the red light from a man's cigar. It was still there, still gleaming when she had gone up to her room. She crossed to the window to pull down the shade, but stood a minute, fascinated, motionless.

"After to-night he will forget me," she murmured sadly. "And I—I shall remember him—forever!"

Then, as though a sudden truth had burst upon her, she drew down the shade, to throw herself, with a quick, impetuous motion, prone upon her couch, and weep the first heart tears she had ever shed.

"It is all over—Miss Viner has refused him." This was the general verdict when, 24 hours later, Jerome Fleetwell made his friends adieu, and withdrew to town on plea of sudden business.

"The news soon reached Dorothy's ear. "I have not refused him," she said aloud; "not even that satisfaction is mine," she said to herself—"nor ever will be! It was only the 'might have been.'"

He was not a man, she knew full well, to plunge desperately into flirtation, or associate his name at once with another woman's, or to retire later or rise earlier or in any way disturb the even tenor of his way. The difference between them was only this—his heart was healing, perhaps already healed, but he would bear its scar to the grave; hers was a festering sore, which hurt the more that she had let the physician who might work its cure pass her by.

The summer wanes to a close. Autumn had touched the mountain and hillside into a glorious beauty of brown and red. Then came winter's lagging footsteps, mercifully bearing the exquisite white shroud of snow to cover up all signs of devastation and decay.

The season in the gay world was at its height. Occasionally murmurs among the debutantes for its honors arose at the fact that, though Miss Viner's fifth winter, her former success paled in its most effulgent light. She and Lieutenant Fleetwell constantly met. She almost wished he might avoid her, but at their first chance encounter he had approached with outstretched hand.

"How charmingly you are looking, Miss Viner," he had said. And all in vain she had watched for a tremor in his tone, or a shadow of embarrassment in his manner.

"Only a week between him and shipwreck," she thought bitterly. "Oh, he has sailed so far from the fatal rock that doubtless he would now laugh at its supposed danger—and I—I was weak enough to think he stood upon the precipice's brink!"

The new year had come, and one evening Dorothy stood alone in her father's drawing room, looking out at the fast gathering darkness, when through its somber shade she saw a figure pass and mount the steps. "A visitor," she uttered wearily; then waited the inevitable announcement she knew must follow. But, spite of her every effort, she started when the servant, throwing open the door, called out "Lieutenant Fleetwell!" Oh, how glad she was that the rooms were not yet lighted as she went forward to receive him!

"May I welcome you in darkness?" she questioned.

"As you will," he answered. "I have but a few moments to stay. I am come to bid you good by and to ask you to wish me bon voyage."

"Bon voyage! You are going abroad!"

"Yes. I sail on Thursday. I hesitated about calling, but my desire to see you led me to believe you would pardon my audacity in supposing my going a question of enough moment to make it worthy a special call."

"My friends are always welcome. I did not suppose it necessary you should hear that repeated now."

"Nor is it. It was only a morbid fancy on my part which induced me to question it. I shall come back, I trust, with my mind clearer. At least I shall be some years older. When I return I presume I shall look for Miss Dorothy Viner in vain, until I find in her some matron, equally charming. I can not imagine her quite staid and portly."

So he could speak thus lightly of her becoming the wife of another man? And he was going away; she might never again hear his voice nor see his face. It was too cruel! He and fate were too strong for her. The tears gathered in the black eyes, but the darkness hid them.

He rattled on—she had no need to speak. Then he rose to go.

"Good by, Miss Viner!—he took her hands in both his—"Good by! God bless you!"

Was it her fancy that just at the last his voice trembled?

He crossed the room; he had gained the door. Another instant he would be gone; another instant it might be too late.

"Jerome!" she said softly.

Two strides, it seemed, brought him back to her side.

"You called me, for what? To make my going harder?"

"Oh, is it hard! In mercy tell me, for my own heart is breaking!"

"Your heart is breaking! Dorothy, Dorothy! what does this mean?" But the sound of her sobs was his only answer.

"Dorothy," he continued, "can it be that I have judged you wrongly? Look up, my darling! Is it your wish that I should stay?"

Then she found her voice. "I thought you did not love me enough," she murmured. "But stay, or if you must go take me with you."

"I will," he answered her simply, as he folded her in his arms.

A month later a great steamer moved slowly out to sea, and as they stood on the deck, hand clasped in hand, with the salt breeze blowing keenly in their faces, it bore them away into the placid beauty of the coming night, toward the Old World and the new life.—[Walter L. Blakey.

The breeding of St. Bernard dogs is quite extensively carried on at Ithaca, Wis. The pups, which sell at from $30 to $40 each, are shipped to Illinois, Indiana, and New York.

A cotton stalk puller has a pulling wheel journaled near the ground on the lower end of a short vertical axle, and operated by gearing from the main horizontal axle.

John Jacob Astor was arrested the other day at Wichita, Kansas, for stealing chickens, and in spite of his name didn't have enough money to pay his fine.

Cookery is a science. No man is born a cook.

SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

Men need moral courage more than they do higher foreheads.

Never address the vilest outcast as you would not speak to your dearest friend.

He who chooses to be led will never redeem the mortgage on his will power.

You can not control the mind; you can not say: This shall go in and this remain out.

After a long experience in the world, I affirm before God, I never knew a rogue who was not unhappy.

It is modesty rather than over confidence which begets trust and reliance among intelligent and thoughtful people.

We can never sustain permanently that which we do not hold in respect, and only when the value and dignity of the affections are fully realized can their culture maintain the place which it really deserves.

Live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name in kindness, in love, and in mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year.

Each one of us is bound to make the little circle in which he lives better and happier; each of us is bound to see that out of that small circle the widest good may flow; each of us may have fixed in his mind the thought that out of a single household may flow influence that shall stimulate the whole commonwealth and the whole civilized world.

It takes two to make a quarrel, but it lies in the power of one to prevent it. The young wife will act wisely and for the happiness of all, herself included, in the home if she always strives to bar the entrance to quarrels by loving patience, gentle words, and ready forgiveness; but this plan of action must begin at the very commencement of her married life. The door once opened is difficult to close, though it can be done by much trying.

To "overcome evil with good" expresses a deep and true philosophy which we do not always fathom when we repeat the words. The enthusiasm which lifts a man out of himself, which makes him forget for a time his own petty affairs, and fills for a time his mind with other thoughts and his heart with other affections, hopes, and desires, is a good which by its mere presence will overcome much evil. Among the many means of lifting and helping others there are few so effective as this.

GLEAMS OF SCIENCE.

It is stated that a machine has been invented which will pick from the plant 1,500 pounds of seed cotton in two hours. According to a test made in Mississippi, 15 men would have to work 10 hours to do what the machine did in two hours.

Nature says that the Russian painter Krilof is painting the portraits of typical representatives of the various races included in the Russian Empire. In carrying out his purpose, he has undertaken many long journeys; and he has now a small gallery which ought to be of considerable value from an anthropological as well as from an artistic point of view.

The new industry of camphor production gives promise of being permanently established in Florida. It is believed that in ten years' time there will be more camphor trees than orange trees in Florida, and that the camphor industry will be more profitable than that of sugar. It is stated that the camphor obtained from the Florida trees approaches more nearly to that of Japan than to Chinese camphor, since the odor of safro is distinctly recognizable.

The electric motor is a formidable rival of the gas engine, the hot air engine, and the small steam engine; but it has not displaced the large sized steam engine anywhere. On the contrary, the building of these has been greatly stimulated by the demand of electric light and power stations. Street car motors of 10 or 20 horse power are common enough, but no one has yet ventured to replace the steam locomotive, generating from a hundred to a thousand horse power. — [Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

A German statistician says that there are 3,985 paper mills in the world, and that of the 1,904,000,000 pounds of paper turned out annually, half is used for printing, 600,000,000 pounds being required for newspapers alone, the consumption of which has risen by 200,000,000 pounds in the last decade. He alleges that on an average an Englishman uses annually 11¼ pounds of paper, an American 10½, a German 8, a Frenchman 7½, an Italian or an Austrain 3½, a Spaniard 1½, a Russian 1½, and a Mexican 2.—[Scientific American.

The grip of an ant's jaw is retained even after the body has been bitten off and nothing but the head remains. This knowledge is possessed by a certain tribe of Indians in Brazil, who put the ants to a very peculiar use. When an Indian gets a gash cut in his hand, instead of having his hand sewed together as physicians do in this country, he procures five or six large black ants, and, holding their heads near the gash, they bring their jaws together in biting the flesh, and thus pull the two sides of the gash together. Then the Indian pinches off the bodies of the ants, and leaves their heads clinging to the gash, which is held together until the gash is perfectly healed.—[Medical Record.

The question has been raised by a physician well posted in matters of railway sanitation whether the fashion of plush paneling as well as upholstering for the interior of sleeping cars is the best to use as regards freedom from carrying infection from contagious diseases. The trains leading toward the various health resorts carry those suffering from consumption or any microbic diseases whose germs may remain in such surroundings. It would of course be next to impossible to trace results to cause in this particular direction, but it certainly seems as if a polished wood finish that can be readily cleaned is freer from any suspicions of this class of danger.—[Chicago Railway Review.

ELECTRICAL.

A patent has been taken out in France for an electric furnace for the rapid incineration of human remains.

Spain is becoming liberal in the matter of telephone lines, the former restriction as to length (10 kilometers) having been abolished.

A third line of telegraph between Berlin and Rome, 1,210 miles long, is to be constructed through Bavaria and the Tyrol, instead of Switzerland, like the present lines. The wire will be of bronze and three millimeters in diameter.

The San Francisco and San Mateo Railway Company has been incorporated, to build an electric road along the route of the franchises granted to B. Joost et al. by San Francisco and San Mateo counties. The capital stock is $2,000,000, of which $40,000 have been paid up.

There is now being perfected in Boston, Mass., an electric tricycle which promises great things. The tricycle is made possible by a recently invented motor, which, weight for weight and bulk for bulk, is about twice as powerful as those of the old models. The machine has now reached a point where it can be run for a distance of from 50 to 60 miles without the storage battery, which furnishes the current, being recharged. Those interested confidently predict that when the machine is placed upon the market it will be provided with a battery powerful enough to propel the machine for a distance of at least 100 miles.

The claim made by electricians that the current passing through the wheels of electric cars tends to bind them to the rails is well known. A Baltimore inventor proposes to apply this principle to ordinary railways. An electric current is passed through the driving wheels and down onto the track, producing an incipient fusion of the metals at point of contact, which effectually prevents the wheels from slipping. The invention, says the Journal of Useful Inventions, will, it is believed, work a revolution in railroad earnings, as engines will be able to pull much heavier loads and at the same time to economize fuel, while grades can be made heavier and expenses lightened in many ways. But how about the incipient fusion of the rails? Will they last as long as heretofore?

PEOPLE OF NOTE.

The Comte de Paris's request that his son should receive a commission in the Russian army has been refused by the Emperor of Russia.

Kalakaua was a third degree Mason. He was also master of one of the Blue Lodges, scribe of the chapter, and warden of the Templars.

It is stated that Mr. Rockefeller speaks in low tones. He is a man who can afford to be very quiet and reserved.—[Atlanta Constitution.

The able, learned, level headed Judge Thomas M. Cooley once said to his law class: "Young gentlemen, beware of the fatal facility of speech."

Miss Mary Darden, of Hampton, Va., claims to be 105 years old, and her word is believed. Her mother died in 1861, at the reputed age of 106 years.

General Lee never executed a spy. He used to say: "Poor fellows, we have got them and they can't do any harm—what is the use of killing them?"

One of the Congressmen elect of North Carolina, W. T. Crawford, is preparing himself for his duties by studying law in the University of North Carolina.

Lieutenant Commander Berry, who had command of the expedition sent out to relieve the Artic explorer De Long, is now stationed at Memphis in charge of the light house district.

Senator elect Peffer, of Kansas, was never known to go to a theater or to wear a dress suit, but he once wore a frock coat unbuttoned, and is expected to resume that attire when he enters the Senate.

It is quite true that Miss Mary Garrett, of Baltimore, has a bath in her house lined with shimmering onyx and that it cost $6,000. But this does not enable her to get along without common water and slippery soap.

Meissonier was one of the many little men who have played big parts in the world's history. His head was large and his shoulders were rather broad, but his body was short and slender. His legs were small and insignificant, but they answered Abraham Lincoln's test, in being long enough to reach the ground.

Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, says that his 12 hours' speech against the force bill was a mere bagatelle, which did not exhaust him a bit. The only way to account for this is to remember that he has gone through still more terrible strains. He has been umpire at a base ball game and once acted as judge at a baby show.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

During 1890 the Baptists sent out the largest missionary force they ever put into the field in any one year.

The Protestant Christian baptisms in Japan in 1889 numbered 5,342, of which 5,007 were of adult converts. These were received into the churches of the 26 different Protestant missionary societies at work in that country.

The Protestant Episcopal Church has 4,163 clergy, 299 candidates for orders, 2,330 parishes and missions, and 508,292 communicants. The number of baptisms last year was 61,665, of which nearly 47,000 were infants. The contributions for the year are $12,754,767.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has adopted the Epworth League as its denominational young people's society. The young people of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Church of Canada, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are now enlisted under one denominatonal banner.

There are now 20,000 Protestant Christians in Mexico. Criticism has been made that the American board is not keeping pace with other denominations on the field. The reason for this may perhaps be seen in this list of annual appropriations to this field: Presbyterians, $90,000; Southern Methodists, $105,000; American board, $24,000.—[The Advance.

The new miracles on which Christianity depends are genuine conversions. When sinners give up their sins and break off their iniquities by turning to the Lord, and are made new creatures in Christ Jesus, they afford living demonstration of the truth of the gospel. The Crucified One becomes the risen Lord in the midst of them. These are "the signs infallible."—[Western Christian Advocate.

In every age there have been men who have been timid about submitting beliefs or traditions to the test of truth. There is a true form of conservatism, but this is conservatism in its weakest aspect. It is so much easier to defend the traditions upon which we were reared than to examine the grounds upon which they rest; it is so much easier for some to sit encushioned in easy self complacency than to trouble their brains to examine, to investigate, and see if these things be so.—[Christian Register.

Buddhism finds it necessary to use the press to maintain its existence in Japan. Once it was enough to rely simply upon its rites, but the power of enlightening thought through gospel agencies and western literature and intercourse compels it to employ new methods for retaining its hold upon the popular mind and heart. It has caught the impetus of the times in that interesting land, and now employs 43 periodicals with which to champion its cause. Christianity evidently shows progress where Buddhist priests and leaders are forced to resort to the pen to withstand its pressure upon their stronghold. On both sides the contention is sharp, vigorous, and determined.—[Presbyterian Observer.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

It is reported that a Japanese merchant has discovered a process for manufacturing cotton from straw.

It has been shown that India rubber may not only be kept emulsified by a borax solution, but may actually be dissolved in the same from the raw solid gum.

Peat fuel has been found very successful in Russia. It is produced by a patent process, and is cheaper than coal, has less weight and bulk, and contains scarcely any sulphur.

Scientists are still uncertain what causes fire to burn blue when salt is thrown on it. Copper, chlorine, and carbonic acid are each said to be at the bottom of the mystery.

The New York Herald has contracted for a new web press that will turn out 90,000 four or six page papers every hour. This will produce 1,500 copies per minute, or 25 copies per second.

"Crushed steel," made by quenching carbon steel, at a very high temperature, in cold water, is being used for cutting stone. This makes it so brittle that it can be pulverized in a stamp mill.

The carbon monoxide gas given off by gasoline stoves is so fatal that one inhalation will destroy human life. The greatest possible care must be taken to insure thorough ventilation when such are used.

A Southern farmer has produced from cotton stalks a fabric suitable for bagging, which may rival jute. The problem which the inventor successfully solved was how to separate cheaply the material from the woody fiber.

A new flash light, says Invention, has been invented and introduced for trial into Italian lighthouses. A clock work arrangement pours, every 30 seconds, 10 centigrammes of powdered magnesium into the flame of a round wick lamp, producing an extremely brilliant flash. This is said to penetrate fog far better than an electric, gas, or oil light.

A new way of annealing thin pieces of steel is to heat the pieces as slowly as possible, and when at a low red heat put them between two pieces of dry boards and screw them up tight in a vise. The steel burns its way into the boards, and on coming together around it they form a practically air tight charcoal bed. When it cools off the steel will generally be found thoroughly annealed.

The elevator is not so modern an invention as many suppose. A correspondent writing to Notes and Queries says: "While reading a manuscript journal of travels, I have come upon an account of a lift, under date of Thursday, October 30, 1777." After describing Empress Queen Maria Theresa's house at Luxembourg, near Vienna, the writer says: "Here is a curious machine of Count Thun's invention, by which the empress, who is too unwieldly to go up and down stairs, is conveyed through a well from one story to another, to the top of her house. There are three strings which, when pulled by the empress, serve as signals to go up, to go down, and to stop."

TREASURER GRAMLEY MOVES

AND TREATS THE "COURT HOUSE RING" TO A GOOD SQUARE MEAL.

On Thursday county treasurer James J. Gramley moved from his former residence on his farm near Rebersburg to one of McClure's houses on Bishop street. As all our readers know Thursday was a lovely day to move excepting, perhaps, the none too good condition of the roads. It took about one dozen wagons to convey Mr. Gramley, his family and household effects from Rebersburg to Bellefonte, and the distance being between twenty and twenty-five miles, it took from early morn until almost four o'clock to make the trip. Once they arrived in Bellefonte, however, it did not take long to unload, as there were scores of willing hands to assist.

But the biggest time of all was getting away with the supper. Mr. Gramley wanted to be neighborly and so invited all his fellow-officials in the court house to come around for supper and, we are compelled to say, every man of them went. There was Miles Kephart, Register Kupp, Recorder Morrison and deputy Dukeman; Prothonotary Schaeffer and deputy Foreman; Commissioner Strohm and Clerk Hunter; District Attorney Meyer and Surrogate Foster—the whole kettle of fish with the exception of Goodhart and Adams and they got ashamed in time and went home. Well, they all went around for supper, and they got it. "Mrs. Gramley certainly knows how to prepare a good meal," was the verdict of all; but oh! how we would like to have Mrs. Gramley's verdict as to what she thought of the way they disposed of it. From four o'clock until dark these hungry fellows sat and devoured the good things. And then when the crowd finally concluded to quit and leave the table Mr. Schaeffer had only got fairly commenced. How long he kept at it we failed to learn, but the crowd came away while he was yet eating, and at eight o'clock word was received that he was just commencing on the pie and cake. As Mrs. Gramley had prepared quite a variety of this delicious desert, it is more than likely that Schaeffer is still eating. Verily the "court house ring" was treated to a good square meal but it almost impoverished Mr. Gramley's larder.

—It has been suggested that the county commissioners, in order to the better facilitate the escape of prisoners from the county jail, plant an electric light pole inside the jail yard wall, and just opposite the one on the outside; this will save walking the wall and thus endangering many valuable lives. And then, as an extra accommodation it might be well to bore holes in the pole and insert iron pins; this would render the climbing of the pole comparatively easy. It is not necessary to offer suggestions of any device to facilitate escape from the jail building, as to get out of that seems a very easy matter.

—A district convention of the Young Men's Christian Association is named to be held in Bellefonte commencing Friday evening, April 10th, and to continue over Sunday. Wouldn't that be a good time to revive some of the genuine Christian spirit in those who had given their pledge to support the young men's association? It seems as if there should then be an effort made to collect money and pay off the old debts and start the Association anew.

—The other night some miscreant broke into the commissioner's office, the district attorney's office and the arbitration room in the court house. It is very plainly seen that the person who went to that trouble doesn't read the county papers, and thereby had no knowledge of the depleted condition of the county treasury, or he never would have been such a fool as to go to all the trouble he did without hope of reward.

A BIG FLOOD.

The only thing that will wet a man who wears a "Fish Brand Slicker" is a flood; but even then he must be under water. This statement may seem strong, but a coat that will stand a two days' storm without leaking, and will not rip or tear, is sure to fill the bill. The additional advantage is that it costs less and wears longer than any other waterproof coat. Have you one? If not, why do you wait until it rains? Sold everywhere. Buy it now. It is a great mistake to wait until it rains to buy a waterproof coat. The time to buy is when the dealer has a clean, fresh stock. Be sure the coat is stamped with the "Fish Brand" Trade Mark, and you will get the best waterproof coat ever made. Don't accept any inferior coat when you can have the "Fish Brand Slicker" delivered without extra cost. Particulars and illustrated catalogue free.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BELVERNON, Pa., Nov. 27, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Gents—I would like to make known to those who are almost persuaded to use Kendall's Spavin Cure the fact that I think it is a most excellent Liniment. I have used it on a Blood Spavin. The horse went on three legs for three years when I commenced to use your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I used ten bottles on the horse and have worked him for three years since and has not been lame.

Yours truly, WM. A. CURL.

GERMANTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 2, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents: In praise of Kendall's Spavin Cure I will say, that a year ago I had a valuable young horse become very lame, hock enlarged and swollen. The horsemen about here (we have no Veterinary Surgeon here) pronounced his lameness Blood Spavin or Thoroughpin, they all told me there was no cure for it, he became about useless, and I considered him almost worthless. A friend told me of the merits of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, so I bought a bottle, and I could see very plainly great improvements immediately from its use, and before the bottle was used up I was satisfied that it was doing him a great deal of good. I bought a second bottle and before it was used up my horse was cured and has been in the team doing heavy work all the season since last April, showing no more signs of it. I consider your Kendall's Spavin Cure a valuable medicine, and it should be in every stable in the land. Respectfully yours,

EUGENE DEWITT.

WOMAN'S WORK AND AIMS.

Two thousand girls are taking cooking lessons in Boston public schools.

Mrs. Putnam, sister to James Russell Lowell, is said to be the best linguist in Boston.

It is proposed to start a new magazine in New York, with Mrs. Mary Rily Smith as editor.

London possesses one lady stockbroker, one lady landscape gardener, and two lady dentists.

Jennie Porter Arnold, now Mrs. W. H. Dale, is engaged upon a novel which is nearing completion.

Mrs. Edison, wife of the inventor, is a good musician and she and her step children constantly practice together.

Miss Emily Howland has been elected a member of the board of directors of the First National Bank, of Aurora, N. Y.

Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood has accepted an editorial position on the Chicago Graphic, and will henceforth reside in that city.

Mrs. Philip D. Armour, the wife of the Chicago millionaire, is a notable housekeeper, and prides herself upon her culinary successes.

An application to the French authorities has been made by Lady Caithness for permission to erect a statue of Mary Queen of Scots near her home in Paris.

Mrs. Alice Wellington Rollins is writing her experiences in Alaska and Brazil. They will be published in a series of articles called "From Palm to Glacier."

Edna Lyall, the novelist, is barely 30. She is a demure, unassuming little woman, who talks slowly and with hesitation. Much of her work is done on a typewriter.

Rose Terry Cooke advises young girls, even those gifted with a literary talent, to place no dependence on literature as a bread winner. "The life," she says, "is full of mortification, anxiety, and disappointment."

London claims to possess the most beautiful woman in the world, the wife of William Morris, artist, poet, and socialist. She keeps very secluded and very few of Mr. Morris's close friends have ever seen her.

Miss Carrie L. Horton, an English girl, won the first prize for a butter study of Marechal Neil roses at the Cheshire dairy show, and now the museum men want her to make butter roses by the year at a high salary.

Kageama Hidde, the young schoolmistress who has become the leader of the Radical party in Japan, is hardly more than 27 years old. She is of medium height and faultless figure, and her eyes are large and beautiful.

In spite of the advancing years and increasing flesh of the Empress of Russia, she has not lost her taste for dancing, but indulges in that pastime nearly as freely as she did in her youth, when her devotion to it won her the name among her friends of the "grasshopper."

A colored orphan asylum has been founded in Georgia by a colored woman, Mrs. Carrie Steele. She has built a cottage and stable, a larger building is going up, and four acres of land around it have already been put under cultivation. Mrs. Steele has collected the money entirely by her personal efforts.

The wife of Francis Scott Key, a grandson of the author of the "Star Spangled Banner," is about to go on the stage. Mrs. Key is a grandaughter of that brilliant lawyer and statesman William Pinckney, of Maryland, and is a familiar figure in Baltimore society. Her maiden name was Tiffany, and she is connected with Rev. Doctor Tiffany.

A party of 50 young English women will start at once for Western Australia under the auspices of the British Women's Emigration Association. The colony is as large as France, the climate healthful, and the colonists prosperous; but there is such a lack of women that the government has taken pity on the housekeepers who can get no help and the bachelors who can find no wives, and the passages of women are to be paid.

Miss Agnes Weston, the sailors' friend, an English lady well known for life long philanthrophy, has been made superintendent of work among the sailors for the World's W. C. T. U. The permanent address of Miss Weston is Sailor's Rest, Portsmouth, England. She has secured the erection of two large buildings, one at Devonport and one at Portsmouth. In one, with her staff of workers, she lives, at her own expense. As she wrote to a friend, "Like one of old, I dwell 'among my own people,' and they are the blue jackets." No woman has ever devoted herself so long and so effectively to the welfare of those who go down to the sea in ships.

Emma Abbott was very charitable. Here is a copy of a letter received from her by a friend in Charleston just after the earthquake. It may be mentioned that Miss Abbott's name does not appear in the published list of contributors to the fund. The letter came from Europe: "I have just read of Charleston's great misfortune, and I wish I could express to you my sympathy and sorrow for my poor friends. Will you please distribute the inclosed among my friends ——, who I know must have suffered heavily. Please don't put my name in the papers. You know they say that Abbott loves to advertise, and so she does; but this is not for advertising purposes." The inclosed was $500.

Mary E. Wilkins's first attempt at regular story writing was sent to Harper's Bazar, then edited by the late Mary L. Booth. Upon opening the envelope Miss Booth, after a hasty glance at the rather immature chirography, said to herself, "I don't think I shall have to spend much time over that manuscript," and put it in her bag to take home. When she began to read it she discovered what is known among editors as a great "find." Miss Booth took the liveliest interest in the young girl, and gave her valuable advice and aid at a time when she most needed them. Harper's Magazine then began to publish her short stories, and the firm soon brought them out in book form—with what success every one who is interested in literature knows.

A DISGRACEFUL SCENE.

THE MILITARY BALL ENDS IN A PRIZE FIGHT.

As stated in the DAILY NEWS on Saturday a military ball was held in the armory of Company B on Monday night. A large crowd was in attendance and, according to the reports of the residents of that locality, they had what might be termed a deal of a time. A keg or two of beer had been procured for the occasion and was stored in the old Heisler & Gross marble yard buildings. Frequent trips were made by some of the boys to these buildings and the result was several of them got blood in their eyes and were anxious for a fight.

This seemed to suit the temper of the crowd and about one o'clock a ring was formed in the neighborhood of the big spring and a general prize fight followed between young Hart and Toss McCafferty. The fight continued for a half hour and was viewed by a large crowd of people, who should have sought means to prevent instead of encourage such a disgraceful exhibition. All the people in that neighborhood were aroused and one gentleman went out on the hunt of a policeman, but as usual none was to be found until the fight was over, although it has since been said that one of these keepers of the peace was in sight, taking it all in, as it were.

From all reports it seems that Hart came off the victor and that McCafferty was pretty badly done up. This is an occasion that needs looking into by the proper authorities. And it is also evident that Bellefonte needs police who will be present on the scene of action and prevent such disgraceful scenes from occurring, or at least continuing for the biggest end of an hour, on our streets.

Guessing Parties.

Now that Lent is over the society people of Bellefonte might introduce the latest "fad" in the guise of "guessing parties." A society journal explains as follows: A half dozen, or more, young ladies go together and arrange to have a little social party on a certain evening at a specified place. They make selection of the young gentlemen they desire to invite and then to each one is sent an invitation, signed by all the young ladies, to attend a little social to be given on such and such an evening at a specified time, but no place is mentioned as to where the party will be held. The young gentlemen are then compelled to exercise their wits to guess where the party is, and possibly they may be obliged to ring the door bells of a half-dozen houses before they strike the right place. In places where such parties have been held they are said to produce an endless amount of amusement. Let the Bellefonte young ladies try it once.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Impatient women, as you wait
In cheerful homes to-night, to hear
The sound of steps that, soon or late,
Shall come as music to your ear.

Forget yourselves a little while,
And think in pity of the pain
Of women who will never smile
To hear a coming step again.

Babies that in their cradles sleep,
Belong to you in perfect trust;
Think of the mothers left to weep,
Their babies lying in the dust.

And when the step you wait for comes,
And all your world is full of light,
Oh, women! safe in happy homes,
Pray for all lonesome souls to-night.

TREED IN PEACE CREEK.

Most of my readers living near Barton or Fort Meade are doubtless more or less acquainted with the difficulties of fording Peace Creek or Tiger Creek, especially during the rainy season.

To the visitor from the North who is accustomed to well kept bridges and foot paths, the obstacles prove most formidable. The creek may look very beautiful from the bank, the luxuriant streamers and festoons of moss hanging from every limb and twig and almost touching the dark water glistening with an occasional ray of light through the live oaks, and swaying with every whiff of wind. It is fairyland, weird and bewildering to the stranger; but as soon as he urges his horse into the water, and looks vainly for some glimpse of another bank beyond the maze of cypress trees and moss, the spell gives way to an unpleasant recollection of all the snake and alligator stories with which his Southern experience has made him familiar.

Phil Cooger, during his six months in Florida, had forded numerous creeks, and penetrated more swamps and savannas than he could enumerate; but so far he had always been with his party, and followed the guidance of skillful hunters and scouts. He was chain boy with a party of surveyors, and already familiar with the pine forests and semitropical swamps of southern Florida. For several weeks they had been working in the unsettled region between Lake Walk in the Water and the old Fort Clinch site. The nearest log cabin was over a day's journey distant, but as they had an abundance of sweet potatoes and coffee, and deer and wild turkeys could be had for the shooting, the party were in the best of spirits.

At length the last stake was driven, and their leader announced that they would start immediately for Fort Meade, where they would have a week or ten days' work in platting out a new addition to the town. A large two horse wagon containing the instruments and camp equipage started ahead, while Phil and the balance of the party followed on horseback. Considerable difficulty was experienced in crossing Tiger Creek, but at length the wagon was safely over, and they hurried forward to Lake Clinch, where they encamped for the night. An early start was made next morning, but in crossing the first creek one of the wheels gave out, and the party was delayed for several hours. It was noon when they reached "old man Guise's place" and halted just west of his banana patch for luncheon.

Like most of the isolated Florida places, they soon discovered that nearly all of the orange trees around the premises were sour. There were a few sweet ones for family use clustered around the door, but the rest were wild.

It has only been for a few years, since the improvement in transportation facilities, that oranges have been regarded as of any value in many sections. As late as 1885 the writer went through several groves where the fruit would not pay for the picking and handling.

It was nearly night when the surveying party approached Pence Creek. They hoped to reach Fort Meade that night, and hurried forward as rapidly as possible, in order to cross the creek while it was light. There is little twilight in Florida, and darkness comes upon one almost before he is aware.

Just as the sun was disappearing they reached the bank of the creek, and at once urged their horses into the black looking water. The creek at this point is very wide; the dense growth of cypress completely screens the banks from view, and unless one is very careful he is apt to lose his course and get into deep water, and perhaps have to wander up or down the creek for some time before finding his way out. During the winter alligators and snakes are little seen, but as soon as the rainy season approaches they make their appearance. In the vicinity of large towns they are rapidly disappearing, but the south Florida lakes and creeks still hold an abundance of them.

As he was about to urge his horse into the creek Phil became aware that the blankets which had been strapped to his horse had disappeared, and remembering he had them but a short time before, he turned his horse to the back track. Ten minutes' ride brought him to where they were lying in the road, and hastily picking them up he turned once more in the direction his companions had taken.

These few minutes were enough to make quite a change in the look of things, and already the tree trunks began to assume the appearance of black sentries along the path. Still Phil felt no misgiving. Fort Meade was quite near, and if nothing happened, he hoped to reach it in a couple of hours at most. The 20 minutes lost had probably given his companions sufficient start to keep ahead of him. Reaching the creek, he tried to take as direct a course across as possible; but there were so many trunks and dead limbs to avoid that he suddenly found himself half submerged, and his horse swimming. Realizing the uselessness of trying to regain the bank, urged him forward toward the other shore. Gnarled trunks, dead limbs, and huge masses of hanging moss blocked the way, and it required all his attention to cling to his floundering horse and dodge the numerous branches.

Phil's legs were hanging in the water, and as he suddenly felt something brush against him, he looked down and saw that a half grown alligator was making an investigation on his own account.

He had lost his early dread of these creatures, and had he felt solid ground under him, would not have been concerned at their presence. But in the water was different, and without a moment's hesitation he grasped an overhanging limb and was soon in the top of the cypress tree. The horse gave a few frantic plunges and disappeared in the gloom. It was the last Phil ever saw of him, and whether he escaped from the creek or not he never learned.

I was not so dark but that Phil could see several ugly noses emerging from the water, attracted doubtless by the noise, and however unpleasant his position might be, he realized that it could have been worse. Had he clung to his horse the chances were that he would have crossed safely, as alligators are seldom bold enough to attack a horseman; but with a 'gator's nose brushing one's leg, one is not apt to think of chances.

Although this was one of the popular fording places, Phil knew there was little probability of his being released that night, and indeed, unless his own party came in search of him, it was not unlikely that several days might pass before anyone came that way. The ford was the highway for the "crackers" living east of the creek, but as most of them gained their living from hunting and cultivating their sweet potato patches, the visits to town were few and far between.

Phil secured himself as firmly as possible in the tree, but as the limbs of the cypress are small and close to the trunk, his position was anything but comfortable. As the darkness increased the natives of the creek began to bestir themselves and lend their voices to the noisy solitude. Phil had heard the hoarse voice of the alligator before, but they sounded differently to him now. A westerner has likened them to the distant bellowings of the buffalo bull when enraged, and when Phil heard them on all sides, and felt the cypress quiver as one of their huge bodies struck against it, a curious sensation "crept up his backbone," as he afterward expressed it.

And so the hours went by, every one seeming an eternity to weary Phil. Occasionally a startling "wheuf!" near his ear made him start and almost lose his hold upon the tree. Then he remembered with a feeling of shame that it was only a vampire bat. Several times during the night the plaintive cry of the panther startled him, and the "swish-swash" of some large animal through the water caused him to peer anxiously through the darkness.

Phil was by no means lacking in courage, but even an old hunter in his position, without arms or prospect of speedy relief, might have been pardoned a little uneasiness.

At length a faint light began to glimmer through the darkness, and Phil gave a sign of satisfaction at the prospect of release from his cramped position. But it was nearly noon when he heard the noise of a horse entering the water, and presently saw a light wagon crossing the creek just above. He recognized the driver as the cook of his party and tried to shout, but hardly knew his own voice, it was so quavering and hoarse. He was heard, however, and the driver, after some difficulty, brought his team within a dozen yards of him; this distance Phil was obliged to swim, making as much noise as possible for the benefit of such 'gators as might be near. In his cramped condition he found it about all he could do to reach the old wagon, and he crowded into it feeling exceedingly thankful that the camp and a hot dinner would soon be within reach.—[Waverly Magazine.

Success Certain.

A practical and helpful gift from a parent to a son would be the following alphabetical list of maxims, printed or written as a heading to a calendar, or framed and hung upon the wall of his room. It is said that Baron Rothschild had these maxims framed and hung in his house:

Attend carefully to details of your business.
Be prompt in all things.
Consider well, then decide positively.
Dare to do right, fear to do wrong.
Endure trials patiently.
Fight life's battle bravely, manfully.
Go not into the society of the vicious.
Hold integrity sacred.
Injure not another's reputation nor business.
Join hands only with the virtuous.
Keep your mind from evil thoughts.
Lie not for any consideration.
Make few acquaintances.
Never try to appear what you are not.
Observe good manners.
Pay your debts promptly.
Question not the veracity of a friend.
Respect the counsel of your parent.
Sacrifice money rather than principle.
Touch not, taste not, handle not, intoxicating drinks.
Use your leisure time for improvement.
Venture not upon the threshold of wrong.
Watch carefully over your passions.
'Xtend to every one a kindly salutation.
Yield not to discouragement.
Zealously labor for the right.
And success is certain.

HER BONNET.

When meeting bells began to toll,
And pious folks began to pass,
She deftly tied her bonnet on,
The little sober-meeting lass,
All in her neat white-curtained room, before her tiny looking-glass.

So nicely, round her lady-cheeks,
She smoothed her bands of glossy hair,
And innocently wondered if
Her bonnet did not make her fair,
Then sternly chid her foolish heart for harboring such fancies there.

So square she tied the satin strings,
And set the bows beneath her chin;
Then smiled to see how sweet she looked;
Then thought her vanity a sin,
And she must put such thoughts away before the sermon should begin.

But, sitting 'neath the preached word,
Demurely, in her father's pew,
She thought about her bonnet still—
Yes, all the parson's sermon through—
About its pretty bows and buds, which better than the text she knew.

Yet sitting there with peaceful face,
The reflex of her simple soul,
She looked to be a very saint—
And maybe was one, on the whole—
Only that her pretty bonnet kept away the aureole.

THE SQUIRE'S PERQUISITE.

"It ought to be here by this time," said the postmaster of Darby, as he shuffled in from taking a squinting view through his fist down the "turnpike."

"Well, I can't wait. If anyone comes, send it up." Jake Perkins picked up his molasses jug and went out.

The Darby mail was late; and when, a few minutes later, some one announced the approach of the mail, the postmaster felt called upon to vindicate his own position by censure of the mail carrier, who clambered slowly out of the dilapidated old buggy called the "stage."

"You must have a powerful heavy mail, you're so long getting here," he began.

"Always have a heavy mail when Billy's abroad," said Uncle Billy Tate, winking as he entered with his usual deliberation and threw the mail pouch with a circular motion over the counter and around behind the small cluster of boxes known as the Darby postoffice.

"That may all be so," said the squire, "but the people of this town don't feel obliged to wait all day on a Government official, on no solider ground than his being fat and his horse lean. This office is run for the people, not for a people, and they want their news on time."

"The news'll keep," said one.

"An' the squire'll never let his perkisites spoil a layin'," remarked another, with a wink.

These frequenters of the combination village store and postoffice knew that the squire at least wanted the news; and it was no secret that the newspapers and postal cards that came in the mail for the families living on the outlying hills gave him an opportunity for supplying his wants—an opportunity not enjoyed by the less favored residents.

In reality the squire had rejoiced over the fact when he took the office, looking upon it as one of the perquisites of the position, and "perquisites" he always had an eye upon.

He had always reasoned that any one had a right to make a good thing when he could. If he had a better chance than most people for news, why, if there was anything to be made out of it, who had a better right to use it?

He distributed the matter among the boxes with great deliberation, and entered the sitting room adjoining the store as soon as the crowd had departed. He slipped a postal card into his wife's hand.

"Perkinses coming, S'liny."

In a very short time his wife thrust her head into the store.

"Why, it don't concern us; there's no news on it," she said with evident disappointment. "What of it?" she questioned, as she slid back to the office and reached up to place the postal card among the P's.

"I'll put that card up, S'liny. Just you leave it down there. So you think that isn't news, and don't concern us! Well, I reckon it does. You wait till I get this mackerel kit down cellar."

Presently he came up from the cellar. "Isn't it 11 miles to Perkins's?" he asked. "And isn't Raf free as water with his money? The man that takes 'em up there's going to get paid for it, and I'm going to be me that man."

"You(Why, Dan'l, where's your t'other horse and your wagon?"

"I've thought that out. Fry's mare for half dollar, and Job's big wagon another, and I'll clear a full five on it."

"But Jake'll go after 'em, sure, if he gets wind of it."

"Just so! But he's got to get wind of it. To-day's Monday, and I'm thinking he won't get that card before Thursday. See?"

"Le, yes; I see, but don't you go to doing anything against the law, Dan'l."

"Well, 'tisn't against the law." The card was whisked among some papers as a customer entered.

Thursday morning found the squire at the early train, but there was no one there answering to the Perkinses' relatives.

"Perhaps the folks you are looking for will come on the night express," said the conductor, of whom he inquired. "That's due at six."

"At six o'clock it'll be dark," he mused, "and they'll pay almost any price to get there. I'll wait; but what ails that horse's foot?"

Inspection proved that the borrowed animal had cast a shoe; which had to be set. Then he had to have crackers and cheese for the day of waiting; but night and the express came at last, and no Perkinses upon it!

"Well, it's queer, mighty queer!" mused the squire, as he drove slowly homeward. "They said Thursday, and here 'tis Thursday night—Whoa-p!"

He had run full into a wagon which was being driven along the dark road. By the light of a match he discovered a sadly wrenched wheel.

"You come, Dan'l?"

It was late when his wife peered out into the gloom as he stumbled in out of the park.

"Yes, I have, and that's more than other folks have!" he answered gruffly.

"Didn't Raf's folks come?"

"No, they didn't, and I don't see what folks want to be writing to make folks traipse 'round after them for like this all for nothing! Anybody been for the mail?"

"No, but a man's been here to buy the old gray, and he said he guessed, seeing that neither you nor the horse was here, he'd back down."

"Jiminetty! If I didn't forget I'd set the day! There's the last chance gone to get rid of Bob. I tell you, S'liny, those Perkinses ought to pay me for this! I'll be out nigh three dollars before I get through with that wheel business!" he groaned. "And all because they didn't come up to their word."

Next day, after the squire had distributed the mail, Jacob Perkins entered the store.

"Hello, squire! What's the matter with Uncle Sam this week?"

"Uncle Sam?" the squire asked, somewhat agitated. Did Perkins know anything about that postal?

"Yes, he's powerfully behind time. I don't know but Uncle Billy 'd had the apoplexy or his horse 'd got choked by an extra oat, and Government hed stopped accordin'ly. I ought to have had a postal from nephew Raf last Monday."

"Perhaps it got delayed. Lots of new men in the service, and Darby's out in the country. Maybe that's it."

He handed out the card with an effort at unconcerned indifference.

"I should say 'twas—and the day after ther fair. If I'd got it when I ought, he wouldn't 've had to got a livery and express wagon to bring 'em all up, and their trunks."

"Hey! Raf come?" the squire exclaimed.

"Bag and baggage, Tuesday, just as he wrote he would."

"Tuesday! You sure it was Tuesday?" The squire's surprise had got the better of his discretion.

"See for yourself. It's plain as daylight."

"Why isn't that an "h" in there?" The squire pointed to the word, as he viewed it through his glasses.

"No, sir! You ain't so used to Raf's writing as we are."

Perkins laughed, knowing the squire's curiosity. "As I was saying, if I'd have known it in time, I'd have got you to go after 'em—I was working so like a beaver, and the roads are bad. You might as well have had that $10 Raf threw away on the livery fellers—an' better, too. I told him so."

"S'liny!"

"Why, what's the matter, Dan'l?" his wife asked in rising accents of alarm, as he put his head in at the door a few moment's after Perkins's departure, a woebegone expression on his face. "One of your attacks coming on?"

"S'liny, the Perkinses have come—the whole family."

"Land sakes!" She bounced up indignantly. "When?"

"Tuesday," he answered slowly and solemnly. "Just what that postal said, too. Here we both of us had that thing here since Monday, and read it Thursday every time. And if I'd been attending to my own business I'd 'a' made $10. As 'tis I'm out of pocket instead of in."

"It's a mortal shame!" she exclaimed sympathetically. "Folks ought to stop writing cards if they can't write 'em plain enough to be read straight."

"Well, I can tell you what's right now." He sat down impressively on the nearest nail keg. "If this Government expects I'm going to spend my time making out its postal cards to get news, it's going to find itself much mistaken, that's all."

He went back to the postoffice with his new determination and a dejected air. His perquisite had lost its value, and such open communications in Uncle Sam's mail were thereafter passed by unnoticed. When his lessened stock of information became a matter of comment, as occurred very soon, he had but one explanation.

"News," he declared, "isn't to be depended on."

But to S'liny he remarked, "It's losing business attending to other folk's affairs without being asked."

So it is a question whether his disastrous speculation ever forced upon him a conviction of the truth in Jake Perkins's opinion, delivered to Raf with a knowing chuckle:

"The squire hain't got as much of a nose for news as he had 'fore he got his come-uppences. I reckon he's learned that his 'perkisites' pay best when they're taken on the square."—[Sarah Bierce Scarborough, in Youth's Companion.

Too Much for Ned.

Governor Nicholls, of Louisiana, as most people know, has lost an arm and a leg, but so deftly have the artificial members been fitted to the stumps that but few people are in the secret of his loss. His colored body servant was left behind on the occasion of his last visit in Vicksburg, and they put at his disposal during his stay there a likely young lad, who was told to try and take the old body servant's place. That night, when Governor Nicholls was ready to retire, he strethed out one of his legs to Ned, the servant, and said: "Ned, unscrew that leg." Ned's eyes began to open with horror, but he obeyed and took the leg off. Governor Nicholls then said calmly, stretching out an arm: "Ned, unscrew that arm." The boy rolled up his eyes until nothing but the whites could be seen, but he obeyed and unscrewed the arm. The Governor, who now realized his condition of mind, determined to have a little fun with him, so, reaching out his neck, he said: "Ned, unscrew that head." But the boy never waited to see whether his head would come off or not, and no one ever succeeded in getting him to go near Governor Nicholls again. He said he was the worst "hoodoo" that he ever saw.—[Cincinnati Inquirer.

AN EASTER STORY.

TOMMY'S TAFFY.

"It is a remarkable occasion, and may not happen again in all your life," so Tommy's father had told him in regard to his seventh birthday, that came on Easter Sunday that year.

The usual birthday party was put off till Monday, but on Saturday night Tommy and 5 year old Lottie were allowed to sit up unusually late, coloring Easter eggs and making taffy; that is, they watched their mother and the cook, and when the taffy was done they ate all they could hold, after which there were several plates full of cream colored love knots, twisted sticks, and animals of all sorts to set away in the ice house, not to be touched until Monday.

It was a bright Easter sun that shone on Tommy's birthday morning; but Tommy's mother had a sick headache, and Lottie couldn't wear her new white dress and pink sash to church, after all.

She didn't mind the disappointment, but Tommy felt so badly about staying at home, it was decided to trust him alone in the big pew, for Tommy's father was the preacher.

When he was dressed in his new white braided suit, feeling very manly with his buttonhole bouquet of lilies of the valley, and waiting for his father to come out from the study, Tommy thought of that taffy, and what a help and comfort it would be to him through the long sermon.

"I won't go and ask ma about it, because she has such a headache it would be awful cruel," said Tommy to himself, "and pa don't like to be disturbed; besides, ma always gives me peppermints and lozenges to keep me awake."

So, although he knew neither of them would let him touch the taffy, by the time he had slipped slily out to the ice house, wrapped a lot in his handkerchief, licked off his fingers, and put on his gloves, he had persuaded himself that Tommy Ray was a very good, thoughtful boy to provide something to help him behave well in church, and not trouble any one about it, and yet he tried to stand so that his father would not notice that stuffed out pocket.

But he forgot all about it as he proudly marched up the aisle after his father, and the novelty of being alone in the big pew, with so many prayer books, hassocks, and footstools at his service, the singing, floral decorations, and other unusual things, drove the candy entirely out of his mind until his father began to preach.

Then he slid down on one of the footstools and drew it out of his pocket. It stuck to his handkerchief and it stuck to his gloves, and before he was satisfied it was all over his face. It was not all eaten by the time he felt sleepy, so he slid along his footstool to the register in the end of the pew, opened it, and with the rest of the candy in his hands, lay his head on a hassock he had put up on the cushions on the seat, und went to sleep.

His father was preaching an Easter sermon on the resurrection, and speaking of the faithlessness of Thomas, who would not believe the Lord had risen till he should see his hands and put his finger in the print of the nails, he cried out in an impassioned, reproachful tone, "Oh, Thomas, Thomas, wherefore didst thou doubt?"

Now this sleeping, sticky little Tommy was accustomed to being called Thomas by his father when he had done something needing reproof, and the words wakened him, so starting suddenly up, his molasses covered handkerchief sticking to his curls, he looked wildly around and then toward the pulpit, with a loud "Sir?"

There was not a little confusion in the house at the funny sight, and seeing smiles on all the faces around him, and his father's look of dismay, he whined out a most pitiful, "What do you want, pa?" and then sank out of sight in a tempest of sobs and tears, mingled with molasses.

Tommy has not yet forgotten that occasion, and he hopes that, as his father says, "It will not be likely to happen again in his whole life."—[Youth's Companion.

Bermuda or Easter Lily.

There is a beautiful legend of Judæan origin that after the Saviour rose from the tomb, the places where He trod were marked by white lilies, which sprang up and blossomed in his footsteps; and this is why white lilies are used to symbolize the resurrection.

What in our country is called "the Easter lily" comes from Bermuda. The "lily fields" are in bloom there from February to May. What a dazzling sight must acres of pure white lilies be, "ranks on ranks of stately lily stalks," blooming not only for beauty, but for use! From these fields we have our bulbs for the greenhouse or home.

They accommodate themselves to varied conditions. If wanted at Christmas or Easter time, the bulbs should be planted from the first of September to the first of December, in five or six inch pots. The soil should be three parts rotted sod and one-fourth well rotted stable manure. Press the bulbs down well in the soil, covering them half an inch. Give a thorough watering, and place in a cold frame, under leaves or hay four or five inches deep. Provide a sash, that the frame may be covered during a rain.

After a month bring into the house, keep the temperature 50 or 60 degrees at night, and 65 or 75 degrees in the daytime. They can be forced faster by increasing the heat. In very cold climates the potted bulbs can be placed in the cellar instead of the cold frame. Do not repot, but add liquid manure if needed.

When the bulbs are done flowering let them rest and ripen, by not watering them, for about two months; they will then flower a second time.

The outdoor cultivation is very easy. They will stand our northern winters, with a deep cover of litter and leaves, and reward the small care they need with a crown of pure white lilies lasting many days.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

AUNT RACHEL

MEDICATED HERB PAD

USED BY THE HOLLAND DUTCH FOR HALF A CENTURY.

The Most Robust People in the World

Cures by Penetration and Inhalation

A Thorough Disinfectant

THE DISCOVERY

Of the particular Herbs for curing and preventing disease by disinfecting and changing the nature of impure air as breathed in the lungs was discovered over 50 years ago by AUNT RACHAEL SPEER, an old noted nurse now over 86 years old, who, from her youth up has been the most successful nurse known

She always has and still does go through rain or shine to freely answer calls from the sick.

It was at labor of love without pay and without price.

AUNT RACHAEL has gathered the Herbs and made and applied thousands of these pad to rich and poor, without charge, and in every nstance the effects were wonderful.

The Pad is made by quilting certain herb and medicine between flaps of muslin, and when worn they are made wet or damp, at frequent intervals, with a tincture which accompanies the Pad.

This tincture combining with the Herbs in the Pad is absorbed through the pores of the skin and the aroma that arises before the nostrils purifies the air you breathe. It is a prevention and cure.

It is a wonderful discovery. Address:

"Saturday Night"

Immensely Popular.

The Leading Family Paper of the United States.

The hold which this beautiful illustrated weekly retains upon the people's confidence is astonishing, but it is due entirely to its varied contents. The value of its stories is not measured by the enormous amount of money they cost, but by the eagerness of the people to read them. It takes ten tons of paper every week to print it. That is over 20,000 pounds. And ten times twenty thousand persons anxiously await its weekly coming.

Every weekly issue of the "Saturday Night" contains a quality and quantity of literary materials satisfying to every member of the family, young or old.

The most gifted authors seek the "Saturday Night" as the channel by which they may gain a reputation. Its pictures are gems of beauty, produced by the best artists.

A new story every second week.

Each paper has six continued stories, as many poems, items of interest, the latest fashions, answers to correspondents, and a variety of humorous and entertaining articles. Specimen copies free.

WEATHER FOR APRIL

Irl R. Hicks' Prophecies for Next Month.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks, in World and Works, makes the following forecast for April weather:

The disturbed meteorological conditions prevailing at the beginning of April will subside about the evening of the 2nd, clearing weather with cold and frosts following in the west as early as the first. The temperature will react, followed by easterly to southerly winds, becoming quite warm, and resulting in storm disturbances on and touching the 5th. All who have intelligently familiarized themselves with our method of forecasting and with nature's normal movements, will look for a cool to cold wave to follow and separate these disturbances from the next storm period However, the presence of the new moon on the 8th, so near our vernal equinoctial passage, will go far to produce prolonged and unsettled weather, with possible violence.

The 11th is the central day of the next regular period, and whatever the results may be in consequence of new moon combined with equinox about the 8th, a warm wave will swing eastward from about the 10th to 13th, culminating in vernal storms of thunder, rain and hail, with snow probable in the north. All whose interests or comfort are involved will look, of course, for the cool and cold nights, with frosts, which are sure to follow. The reactionary day falls on the 16th, closely blended with, and possibly precipitated by moon's first quarter on the 15th. Another cool spurt will follow from the west and north.

The 22d, 23d and 24th are the danger days of the next regular storm movements. At this season, when very warm, sultry days result, and active, angry clouds appear about the danger days, all should keep a calm, prudent eye on the situation. Forecast in your minds the best thing to do in case of danger—quietly watch its approach and at the critical moment, save yourselves and families. The 28th and 29th are storm days, intensified by a Mercury equinox central on the 29th. The month will end very cool, with frost and some freezing. Our forecasts for May will necessarily embody some unusual and important features. Find them in our May number.

STRANGE REVOLUTION IN WOMEN'S DRESS WILL AMERICAN LADIES DARE ADOPT IT

Some predict that the great change in the fashioning of the clothes which are to be worn by women this coming season is the most wonderful victory of the nineteenth century—if fashion leaders can be induced to adopt it, and appear just once in public so arrayed.

Men will hold their breath in wonder at the marvelous change it makes in lovely woman. "Few of the fair sex can help being beautiful in these glove-fitting costumes," says a writer in a recent number of "The New York and Paris Young Ladies' Fashion Bazaar." "This magazine is the only one in Europe or America that makes a specialty of giving those inclined to stoutness an unrivalled appearance of sculptured slimness," said Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales. Madame Patti has ordered from the Paris house 4 magnificent costumes, the designs of which appear in the APRIL number of this Fashion Bazar—and in this magazine only.

Mrs. Harrison is greatly fascinated with the exquisite gem, costume No. 4, in the April number. It is expected she will give an order for an exact counterpart of it, e wh front of which will be incrusted with pin-head diamonds. This gown alone will be worth a king's ransom.

—The quite young folks on Bunker hill enjoyed themselves in attendance at a masquerade party given at the residence of Mr. Derstine, on Penn street.

The Ladies' Home Journal.

There is all the sunshine of spring and the fragrance of flowers in The Ladies' Home Journal for April; the exquisit Easter cover, designed by W. Hamilton Gibson, is a fair index to the charm of the whole number. The prevading Easter spirit finds perhaps its happiest expression in the fiction, Mrs. Whitney's delightful serial, "A Golden Gossip," being continued, while Maud Burton and Caroline A. Mason contribute seasonable short stories. The Mrs. "Rossiter Lamar" of the latter, an exceptionally strong story, forms as attractive a feature as the clever sketch of Mrs. T. De Witt Talmage, which is accompanied by a fine wood-cut portrait. The number is complete in every part, and richly illustrated throughout. Issued at ten cents per copy or one dollar a year, by the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

At this season of the year when malaria lurks in the air, and bad colds not an unfrequent visitor, we long for a quick and effective remedy. There is scarcely a home without a sufferer from some of the many ills the flesh is heir to. A stimulant is after the intermediator. It is quick and effective. It brings relief and saves doctors bills. We can reccommend Mr. Max Klein for anything in the liquor line. His silver age Rye at $1.50 per quart is the best whiskey in the market. He will sell a y Pennsylvania Rye Whiskey six years old, at 1.00 for each quart or s x for $5.00. Send for his price list and catalogue and menti n this paper.

SLICK SWINDLER.

BUT NOT SLICK ENOUGH FOR A BELLEFONTE MILLINER.

The following incident transpired a few weeks ago but the lady who was so near "taken in" to the tune of eight dollars has kept the story very quiet but, as sure as murder will out, so will the DAILY NEWS representatives get onto all the news that's going. According to our informant the story is as follows:

A few weeks ago a fashionably dressed handsome young gentleman entered the store of one of Bellefonte's leading milliners and inquired for the proprietress. The lady in question presented herself when the young man introduced himself as the representative of one of the largest wholesale milliner's houses in New York—a house from which the Bellefonte milliner had purchased many dollars' worth of goods. The young man said he was out introducing a new and exclusive line of millinery which they gave out on commission and he desired the lady to take the agency for the same in Bellefonte. According to his representation she was to place an order for a stated quantity of the goods which would be sent her and with them a handsome showcase for displaying purposes. For this she was to pay eight dollars in cash which amount was to be deducted whenever she had sold a stated amount of goods.

The lady was agreeable to the proposition, gave her order, payed the eight dollars and the young and handsome stranger gallantly bowed himself out. The young man departed on the next train for another town. Shortly afterward the milliner was glancing over a paper when she chanced to see a piece in which a reward of $300 was offered for the detection and arrest of this very man, who was none other than a genteel swindler, who used the firm in question as a means of gulling the unwary out of their eight dollars. But the Bellefonte lady was not to be outdone. She followed the rascal, confronted him with the evidence of his swindling scheme and compelled him to divulge her eight dollars.

Foolish as it was, the lady failed to inform or make information against him, which she could have done thereby causing his arrest and entitling her to the $300 reward, but with the recovery of her money she was satisfied and returned home. She gave as her reason for not having him arrested that she was afraid he might come back and cause her harm. Of course the young man took the hint, when thus confronted with evidence of his guilt, and immediately skipped to parts unknown and, so far as known, is still at large. It would be well for the public and especially the milliners, to keep a sharp lookout for the handsome young man who is introducing a new and exclusive line of millinery.

A Lady's Perfect Companion.

"Painless Childbirth," our new book, tells how any woman may become a mother without suffering any pain whatever. Also, how to treat and overcome morning sickness, swelled limbs and other evils attending pregnancy. It is reliable, and highly endorsed by physicians as the wife's true private companion. Send two-cent stamp for descriptive circulars and confidential letter, sent in sealed envelope. Address FRANK THOMAS & Co., Publishers, Baltimore, Md.

—The display of spring bonnets and spring styles was not very large on Sunday owing to the very winter-like weather. It will no doubt be a great disappointment to a great many young ladies who were just longing for Eastern Sunday in order to have an opportunity to display their new hat, new dress or new wrap. But it will keep, and probably it will be better for the health of the owner that the weather is not propitious as a great many bad colds are contracted on Easter Sunday simply by changing clothing before the weather is warm enough to justify doing so.

You are in a Bad Fix.

But we will cure you if you pay us. Men who are Weak Nervous and Debilitated, suffering from nervous debility, Seminal Weakness, and all the effects of early Evil Habits, or later indiscretions, which lead to Premature Decay, Consumption or Insanity, should send for and read the "Book of Life," giving particulars of Home Cure. Sent (sealed) free, by addressing Dr. Parker's Medical and Surgical Institute, 151 North Spruce St., Nashville, Tenn. They guarantee a cure or no pay,—The Sunday Morning s10-1y-d&w.

The "Cato" Dedicated.

An Important Case Settled and Operations Commenced.

For almost two years there has been litigation between the Lehigh Valley Coal company and the Saylor & Madill Mining company regarding the ownership of the coal right on a tract of land located at Cato, a quite new village on the Beech Creek railroad, about eight miles from Snow Shoe, but on March 17th the Supreme Court decided the case in favor of the Mining company and on that same day the first coal mine was opened and dedicated and the first car of coal was loaded and shipped.

Mr. John *M*adill, of Snow Shoe, is the general superintendent of the new company, which is incorporated and has a capital of $100,000. Another member of the company is Philip Resides, of Unionville, who is also one of the land owners. The vein is a large one and the quality of coal excellent.

The beginning of operations was cause for great jollification among the residents of Cato, as well as some people of Snow Shoe. Supt. Madill and wife, Dr. Young, DeLong Stuart, Mr. Resides and about two score of others witnessed the loading of the first car. After the car was loaded refreshments were served to all present and the new mine was named "Cato" by Mrs. *M*adill. The crowd protested, claiming that it should have been named after the Superintendent but, after an explanation from that gentleman as to why it ought to be called "Cato," all were satisfied.

In the evening a jollification and concert was held from 7 to 11 o'clock. Mr. Reed took the part of comic singer; Mr. Cronin, Irish comedian, and John Sample lectured on "Burns, the Scotch poet." The evening passed away most delightfully and the large gathering went home well pleased with the success of the entertainment and the dedication and opening of the new colliery. As to the new company, having finally gotten firmly established, it starts out under most favorable circumstances and we predict for it, and there is no doubt but what it will have, a very prosperous future. The gentlemen engaged in the enterprise are all men of enterprise and ability and this alone would guarantee it a success from the beginning.

—The landlord down in Florida who charged John Jacob Astor $39 per day for board while that gentleman and his newly made wife were down south on their wedding trip, ought to be ashamed of himself. Doubtless John had been saving up for months in order to have enough to commence housekeeping with and then to be robbed of it in that way. It's perfectly dreadful, so it is.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning. You are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Liver and Kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50 cents at C. M. Parrish's drug store.

—General Hastings has gone on the lecture platform. On Tuesday evening he lectured in Chambersburg on his "Reminiscences of the Johnstown Flood." The hall in which the lecture was given was crowded and the General was enthusiastically received. Wouldn't it be a good idea for the General to deliver his lecture in Bellefonte for the benefit of some home church or society? He would find just as appreciative an audience in Bellefonte as anywhere else.

—The Western Union Telegraph office was moved today from room 14, at the end of the hall second floor of the Bush Arcade, to room 8, the first door to the right at the head of the stairs. General Manager Rankin, will now think himself one of "the people" as he sits at those broad windows and views all the pretty girls that pass up and down High street.

—The pesky little fly will soon put in an appearance.

The Reynold's Elocution Prize.

It will be remembered by our readers that last winter Major William F. Reynolds offered prizes for the best rhetorical exercise, the first being $15 or a gold medal; the second $10 and the third $5, to be contested for by ten pupils of the High school, to be selected by the faculty out of the three highest classes and to be named according to the record they would make during the fall and winter term. The time having expired on Wednesday the Faculty made the choice and Principal D. M. Lieb read the list of names of those entitled to compete, which is as follows—the scholar with the best record heading the list and so on to the end:

Misses Bessie Stroop, Mary Wright and Rosa Levy, of Milesburg; George Brandon, Jr., Jennie Twitmire, Roland Curtin, Ella Twitmire, Harry Gerberich and Charles Garner.

The Committee of Judges, the time, place and manner of competing for the prizes will be named by the donor, Major W. F. Reynolds, and the President of the School Board, D. F. Fortney, Esq. Whenever these two gentlemen take action in this matter the DAILY NEWS will inform its readers, also the students of the High School, of their verdict

Protect Your Health.

Cold and moisture combined have a torporizing effect upon the bodily organs and the digestive and secretive processes are apt to be more tardily performed in winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the excretory functions. The bowels are often sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therefore, requires opening up a little, and also purifying and regulating, and the safest, surest and most thorough tonic and alterative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persons who wish to escape the rheumatic twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bilious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of the year, will do well to reinforce their systems with this renowned vegetable stomachic and invigorant. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

A Fine Car

The "Dixie" palace sleeper which conveys the Al. G. Field minstrels, is one of the most palatial in all its appointments of any private car in the world. While Mr. Field, the manager, doesn't believe in plush curtains on the stage, his private car is fitted up with drapings and portieres that would even make the plush minstrel king envious. It may be that Field is all plush and several yards wide—a tip-top gentleman.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

—On Thursday evening, the regular meeting night of the I. O. O. F., the members of that organization, after the regular business of the evening had been transacted, gave a farewell banquet to Mr. A. Sternberg. It was an occasion of mingled pleasure and sorrow. The members of the Bellefonte Lodge will be sorry to lose Mr. Sternberg but nevertheless they all wish him hearty fellowship with the order in Seattle.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

—About ten dollars were netted at the entertainment given by Mr. L. T. Eddy, in Boggs' Hall, Milesburg, on Friday night.

MESSE-PETERS

Two Loving Hearts Happily United.

On last Tuesday evening the Baptist church at Port Matilda was filled to overflowing with the good people of that village who were anxious to witness the marriage of J. O. Meese and Emma Peters.

It was promptly at 7.30 o'clock when the wedding couple marched in to the tune of the wedding march as played by Miss Edith Jones, and arranged themselves before the altar where stood Rev. Bardens, who at once proceeded to perform the ceremony which made them man and wife. Misses Susan Williams and Bella Jones were bridesmaids and Clifford Chaney the groom's best man, while Mr. Alex Chaney gave the bride away. The ushers for the occasion were Messrs. S. S. and Howard Miles.

The wedding party looked very lovely indeed. The bride was arrayed in a handsome toilet of bronze silk and carried a boquet of cut flowers. The groom was becomingly arrayed in a neat-fitting suit of conventional black, while the bridesmaids wore lovely costumes appropriate to the occasion.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the happy couple entered the carriage of Mine Host General Woodring and were driven to the station, followed by congratulations, good wishes and showers of rice, where they embarked on the 8.10 train for a short tour through the eastern part of the state. When they return they will at once go to housekeeping in Tyrone where the groom has already prepared a cosy and comfortable home. We beg to be allowed to extend congratulations.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Treecott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones".—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at C. M. Parrish's Drug Store.

—On Sunday week a new Baptist congregation was organized at Port *M*atilda. This church at one time flourished at that place but it gradually dwindled down until but few remained. Of late however, Rev. Bardens, the pastor in charge, has been doing some good work and enough have joined faith with those that remained to justify the reorganization of a congregation. Five new converts were baptised and taken in as members on Sunday.

—All the licenses granted in Centre county have been lifted. The lifting of the licenses caused quite a snug sum of revenue to be paid to the revenue collector. All borough licenses are taxed $150.75, while those out through the county are taxed just $75.75. At this rate the licenses granted in Centre county would net about twenty-seven hundred dollars.

ESCAPED REFLECTIONS.

No Word as to the Whereabouts of Tims and Pennington.

At this writing no knowledge as to the whereabouts of the escaped prisoners, Tims and Pennington, has been obtained. The authorities are even at fault as to just what part of North America the two would choose. One thing is very evident—the climate of Bellefonte didn't agree with them—they had no hesitation about changing their headquarters. Pennington told some of his fellow-prisoners tha he expected to take a trip to Florida for the benefit of his health but this story is looked upon as simply a "misleader" and thus far the general impression that seems to prevail is both young men have taken Horace Greely's advice and have gone west to grow up with the country.

One thing is certain, Pennington could go most anywhere he would please as it is positively known that he had $400 on his person the night he escaped. It is also more than likely that he would go to Kansas as that is where his father is and where he had intended going until he got into trouble here. Word was telegraphed to the authorities in Pittsburg to be on the lookout for them. Word was also sent to Ramey where Tims had been staying and where his clothes now are.

The escape was a very clean one and could have been taken advantage of by all the prisoners had they so desired, as every cell door had been unlocked and every man invited to go along but all of whom refused. The escape took place about 1 o'clock and the fact was not discovered till after seven. Sheriff Ishler was away at the time, having gone up Buffalo Run on the early morning train. As stated on Wednesday, the escape was made by the use of false keys, supposed to have been made by Tims who was a locksmith by trade. Where and when they got the material is the only mystery. All the doors being opened the two men walked out, used a ladder to scale the wall and then slid down the same pole that Wilson used.

PHILIPSBURG HAPPENINGS

A Grist of Items from Our Hustling Neighbor Town

PHILIPSBURG P. A., March 23.—The Hungarian who was blown up last week at or near Houtzdale by the explosion of a car of powder, and who was the first patient in the Cottage hospital at this place, died this morning and was taken to Houtzdale for burial.

One day recently the two-year-old son of W. H. Whiton, who lives in North Philipsburg, fell from a horse he was riding to water and sustained a fracture of his left limb. He was taken to the hospital for treatment.

George Baney, while shifting loaded cars at the Troy mines was so unfortunate as to have his foot run over and badly mashed.

Theodore Richards is lying in a very helpless condition, the result of a severe stroke of paralysis.

A few days ago Miss Kate Farber and Miss Gertie Kinkead took it into their heads to e up a surprise party for G. M. Wike, it being the occasion of his 20th birthday. It is needless to say their efforts were a success but the biggest part of their labor was to get George home from Osceola, where he is employed as night operator. This, however, was finally accomplished by telephoning to him that his mother was ill and wanted to see him. Of course his surprise was complete when he arrived home and learned the true cause of his summons. A very pleasant evening was spent. The house being too small to accommodate the crowd an adjournment was made to the Reliance hall nearby where dancing was indulged until the early morning hours. Choice refreshments were served at eleven o'clock. Quite a number of friends were present from Tyrone and Osceola and they all were unanimous in voting the occasion a grand success.

is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerve without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c., produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken.

Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.

Local Department.

—Lent is over.

—Mince pie time is about over.

—Millinery openings are dawning.

—Easter was both green and white.

—How many eggs did you eat on Sunday?

—The ice cream signs are again appearing.

—The next holiday will be Decoration Day.

—The corner loafers will soon be out in force.

—Easter was a nice day overhead, anyway.

—Will Bellefonte have a base ball team this summer?

—It is not too late to advertise for the Spring trade.

—In another month or so picnic parties will be all the go.

—Bicyclers are anxiously waiting for the mud to dry up.

—The fruit trees will be blossoming in a few more weeks.

—Spring bonnets and dresses were at a discount on Sunday.

—Take love and taxes—especially taxes—out of life and not much is left.

—Bellefonte ought to put forth a determined effort to secure additional industries.

—Strawberries are selling in eastern markets for from 35 to 60 cents per box.

—Mr. Frank Graw has accepted a position with the Centre Lime company in Harrisburg.

—After a week's trial the Media courts acquitted Mrs. Schmidt of the murder of her sister.

—Barnum's circus and menagerie is heading this way. It will be in Williamsport on May 21.

—Mr. L. T. Eddy, of Milesburg, is improving his house by the application of a new coat of paint.

—A certain Linn street lady failed to go to Lemont on Friday because it took her too long to dress.

—Two thousand dollars per year and no light on Sunday night. Taxpayers what do you think of it?

—Mr. A. Sternberg and family departed on the 5.20 train Monday evening for Seattle, Washington.

—Mr. Emil Joseph's new residence on Curtin street is always brilliantly lighted up in the evening.

—New signs, prohibiting fast driving, have been put up at either side of the High street bridge over Spring creek.

—The green grocery and cigar store of Peter F. Kechline was locked up by Sheriff Ishler on Monday night.

—It won't be long until the fellow, who for the past six months suffered with the chills, will be afflicted with spring fever.

—Constans Commandery observed Good Friday by attending services in the Episcopal church this morning in a body.

—Invitations are out announcing a high tea to be given by Miss Annie Orvis on Friday, the 3rd of April, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

—If you don't repair your old sidewalks pretty soon the police will be around and take your measure for a new one.

—A very select musical concert will be held in the Presbyterian chapel parlors on Tuesday evening, the 7th day of April.

—Governor Pattison has appointed the 10th day of April and the 1st day of May as Arbor days. Now get your trees ready.

—It is said that one day last week a man up Buffalo Run valley moved by moonlight. Reason—he hadn't paid his rent.

—About eighteen inches of the beautiful fell on Friday and Friday night. This is a good circumstance by which to remember Good Friday.

—April first is generally regarded as a settling up day. Now while you are about it don't forget the printer, he needs money as bad as anybody.

—Master Bernie Green, of Milesburg, was severely burned about the face on Tuesday afternoon while attempting to mould a sinker for his fishing tackle.

—A well-executed counterfeit two dollar bill has recently been put in circulation. It is now believed that very few of them will be found in country newspaper offices.

—The assessors' books are now about ready and it wont be many days until these worthies will visit you one and all and ask almost as many questions as an 1890 census taker.

—On Monday a prominent M. D. went into a store and purchased a cigar, then asked the clerk in attendance for a "spoon to light it with." Such absent-mindedness is hard to account for.

—The military ball given by Company B. on Monbay night was very largely attended. The famous drum-major of the Fifth Regiment, and who lives in Altoona, was among the guests from a distance.

—Nelson P. Reed, Editor and proprietor of the Pittsburg Commercial Gazette, died at his home in Pittsburg on Saturday evening from the effects of the grippe. He was aged about 50 years.

—The family of Mr. J. S. Gillam moved to-day from this place to Tyrone. Bellefonte is sorry to lose this family as Mr. Gillam was an enterprising business man, and his family was very sociable.

—Next Monday night Al. G. Field's minstrels will appear in Garman's opera house. You don't want to miss this entertainment as it is one of the most celebrated minstrel troupes in the United States.

—Sunday was easter and, with the blooming of a small crop of new bonnets and costumes, came an unusually large crop of tramps. They could be seen two and three thick on almost every street in town.

—According to the Lock Haven papers over 250 new pupils will enter the Lock Haven Normal with the beginning of the Spring session. This will make a total of over 400 students in attendance at the school.

—Mr. Wistar Morris, who died on Monday is said to have left a fortune valued at $20,000,000, with nobody but a wife and one daughter to inherit. A considerable bulk of it, however, was left to charitable institutions.

—Don't forget the Y. M. C. A. conference to be held in Bellefonte commencing Friday, April 10th, and closing on Sunday following. Entertainment will be provided for out-of-town delegates who will notify Hugh Beaver, Bellefonte, Pa., of their coming.

—Senator Meek has introduced a bill in the Senate providing for a Cottage Hospital at Philipsburg. Also a new Congressional apportionment bill, which would make Centre county in a district uncompromisingly democratic. This bill, however, is not likely to ever become a law.

—The criminal list for the next court will not be very large—that is if the prisoners keep on escaping in the future as they have in the past. The civil list for the first week is now out and it numbers just twelve cases. There are very few important cases on the list for the first week, however.

—Mr. Cornelius Dale, of Lemont, when attempting to cross the railroad at Hart's crossing near that town, had the rear end of his wagon struck by the engine of local freight going east. The wagon was somewhat damaged but neither Mr. Dale nor his horses were seriously injured, although Mr. Dale was thrown from the wagon.

—Mr. Isaiah Clark will move his family from Lamb street to the house lately occupied by S. M. Buck, on Spring street. It is also said that Mrs. Saltzman and her daughter, Miss Jessie, will move from the the residence of General Hastings to rooms in Crider's Exchange. Mr. Spigelmeyer will move from Penn street into the house now occupied by W. F. Reber.

OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

DISCUSSES THURSDAY EVENING'S TEMPERANCE MEETING.

Thursday evening last was the regular evening for the meeting of the new temperance club in this place and having little else to do your "man about town" dropped in to see how the society was prospering, and we must acknowledge that the interest shown by the large attendance at these meetings is at least one comfort to the temperance workers of this community. The attendance on Thursday evening was large and the opening exercises extremely interesting. There was reading, singing, prayer and speeches by several prominent gentlemen.

Finally the society got down to work on the resolution business. Dr. Van Tries started the ball rolling by introducing a resolution commending the action of Representative Lytle, of Huntingdon, in his fight against the liquor bill now pending before the legislature. The doctor moved that the resolution be passed and published and that a copy of the same be sent to Mr. Lytle. J. L. Harris said it was useless to pass such a motion as there wasn't a newspaper in Centre county that would publish the resolution, as they were all opposed to temperance. But a compromise was made and the resolution passed.

Then another resolution was offered condemning Judge Furst for granting licenses in Huntingdon county. Another offered an amendment extending the resolution to Centre county, as well. Another member offered another amendment in effect that the resolution should read "condemning the court" and not one man alone. Then another member thought that it might be possible some time in the future the society would desire some favor at the hand of the court and as their action was now unchangeable it might be policy to amend that resolution by making it read "that we condemn the granting of all licenses, etc." At this juncture another wide awake member jumped up and remarked that inasmuch as Judge Furst or, for that matter, anyother member of the bench, was not just now running for an office it might be well not to pass any resolution whatever. This suggestion seemed to carry the day, inasmuch as the original resolution had been completely buried under the numerous amendments that had been piled onto it.

The resolution question being finally disposed of there was more music, reading, etc., and at a reasonable hour the meeting adjourned to meet in one week.

MAN ABOUT TOWN.

Will Occupy the Reynold's Mansion.

On Saturday Capt. W. F. Reber rented the Reynold's residence on the corner of Spring and High streets, into which he will move this week and there reside for the next year. Mr. Reber had intended moving to Harrisburg, where he holds a responsible position under Governor Pattison, but what time he has been there of late he has been ill with malaria and he therefore has some hesitation about moving so close to the river, for fear his health would not be good.

Don't be Gloomy.

Those who are the victims of mercurial poisoning, or who are suffering from mercurial rheumatism, are inclined to take a gloomy view of life when, as the poet says, "Winter is folding its white tents and spring getting its thunderstorms together." Yet these victims have no reason to despair. S. S. S. is a sure remedy for all forms of mercurial poisoning. Though it is purely a vegetable medicine, it is powerful indeed, when called on to chase mercury, and the last lingering effects of mercury, out of the system. It performs the work with neatness and dispatch, as thousands of testimonials show.

To Inspect the Normal.

The sub-committee on appropriations of the House visited Lock Haven on Monday. The committee consists of Hons. S. M. Wherry, of Cumberland, J. H. Holt, of Centre, and James Mullin, of Bedford. They will inspect the Central State Normal School; under a resolution to investigatie the institution in that city and also one at Clarion.

Dyspepsia's victims are numbered by thousands. So are the people who have been restored to health by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Commissioner of Pensions.

A rumor was telegraphed the NEWS from Pittsburg on Tuesday evening that the administration at Washington had decided to appoint General James A. Beaver Commissioner of Pensions. The General not being in town the NEWS gives the report for what it is worth expressing the hope, however, that it may be true. The General undoubtedly would make a good Commissioner as having been a soldier himself, and a good one, he can fully appreciate the needs of the old comrades.

Since writing the above a NEWS representative interviewed Mr. J. W. Gephart, General Beaver's law partner, and that gentleman said that the administration might have offered General Beaver the position but he does not think the General would accept it under any circumstances, and he really does not think there has yet been an open appointment.

He Did Not Know It.

EDITOR DAILY NEWS:—I noticed in Thursday's NEWS a piece stating that a crowd had a keg or two of beer in the old Heisler & Gross marble yard buildings on the night of the military ball. Will you please notify that crowd that said shop belongs to me. George Taylor keeps his horse in that stable and, outside of the person who tends that horse, nobody has any right in that shop unless they get permission from me to enter it.

On the evening in question I was out of town and knew nothing of the occurence until the next day. Had I been at home my shop would not have been used for the purpose it was. The buildings are always kept locked at night and how the parties gained an entrance I know not. This is no trifling notice, as I mean every word above written.

Yours respectfully,

A. M. MOTT.

Weather and Fruit.

An aged gentlamen, who visited this office on Tuesday said, that we might expect disagreeable weather all through April. He said that the last Friday in the month always ruled the following month, and as the last Friday in March was rain and snow, so might we expect such weather during April. The same gentleman also said that there was a certain day in the Spring of the year that ruled the fruit crop. If the sun shone that day there would be plenty of fruit; if it didn't there would be none. Last year it was cloudy all day while this year the sun shone brilliantly from morn till night. So look out for plenty of fruit.

—Is not the disgraceful scene of Monday night a suitable case for the W. C. T. U. to work on? If beer was had and a fight occurred through its use, as it is so alleged, surely there was a violation of the law somewhere by somebody. And if there was a violation, the violators should be made to suffer the full penalty. It is a disgrace to a civilized community that such actions should be tolerated, and it is an imposition on the tax payers to pay $35 per month to two policemen to keep order and to have such brutality occur in such a prominent place.

The Fish Season.

Following is the open season of the fish law of this stateand anglers can govern themselves accordingly: Salmon and spreckled trout, from April 15 to July 15 (in Pike county, May 1 to August 1); lake trout, January 1 to October 1; black and rock bass, May 1 to January 1; pike and pickerel, June 1 to December 1; German carp, September 1 to May 1; shad and herring, January 1 to June 20th. Hunting or fishing on Sunday is prohibited.

Editor W. Cann, of the Philipsburg Journal, has severed his connection with that paper and will depart on Friday for New York where he has accepted a more lucrative position. Mr. Cann is a wide awake and earnest newspaper man and in his labors on the Philipsburg daily succeeded in making it one of the brightest little dailies in Central Pennsylvania. We wish him success in his new location.

Steady employment and liberal wages is offered in another column by Sears, Henry & Co., Geneva, N. Y. They are a reliable firm. Established 1865.

DEATH OF H. A. MINGLE.

EXPIRES AT HIS HOME IN AARONSBURG ON SUNDAY.

We are sorry to be obliged to announce that ex-Commissioner H. A. Mingle died at his home in Aaronsburg on Sunday, the 29th, from the effects of heart disease, and after a very brief illness.

Mr. Mingle was the father of our enterprising townsman, Mr. A. C. Mingle, the prominent shoe dealer, on Allegheny street. He was aged at the time of his death just a little over seventy-three years. Mr. Mingle was a shoemaker by trade though it has been many years since he worked at the business. In 1874 he was elected commissioner of Centre county, and served very creditably in that official capacity during the three years of his term. For many years he has been a faithful and consistent member of the Reformed church and at the time of his death was serving a term as elder. Five children are left to mourn their loss. They are as follows: Mr. W. B. Mingle, cashier of the Pennsvalley Banking company at Centre Hall; A. C. Mingle, the boot and shoe dealer, of Bellefonte; D. H. Mingle, a prominent physician in Dakota. Ill.; Thomas J. Mingle, of Lincoln, Neb., and Edward G. Mingle, of Aaronsburg.

The funeral of the deceased will take place from his late residence in Aaronsburg on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

ROBERT GOHEEN DEAD.

HE EXPIRES AT SEVEN O'CLOCK THIS MORNING.

A telephone dispatch from Boalsburg conveyed the sad intelligence that Mr. Robert Goheen, the well known auctioneer of Boalsburg, died at his home near that place this morning at seven o'clock, from typhoid pneumonia, and after an illness of only five days. The deceased was aged 78 years and was one of the best known citizens in Centre county. He leaves a family of several children, all grown up and married, to mourn their loss. Mrs. Goheen died some three years ago.

The funeral will take place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. Black of Boalsburg, assisted by Rev. Elliott or Laurie, of this place; interment will be made in the Branch cemetery, where several of Mr. Goheen's children are buried.

A Family Duty.

The home circle is sacred and life has few charms indeed if family ties are burst asunder. The promotion of happiness and the prevention of sickness are of prime importance in every household. It is in the spring that old and young alike are most susceptible to the hundreds of diseases that fill the atmosphere we breath and lurk in the water we drink. The timely use of a reliable stimulant is the only sure way to guard against sickness in the home. Max Klein's "Silver Age" and "Duquesne" brands of pure rye whiskey are recommended by physicians as the best invigorator in the world. Both are sold under a sworn guarantee of purity. "Silver Age" at $1.50 per full quart bottle, and "Duquesne" at $1.25. These whiskies are used exclusively in the leading hospitals, which is sufficient evidence that they are the best obtainable.

Mr. Guckenheimer, Finch, Gibson and Overholt are sold by Mr. Klein at $1 per quart, or six quarts for $5. His stock of wines, brandies, etc., is the largest in Pennsylvania. Goods promptly shipped to all parts of the United States. Send for catalogue and price list, mentioning this paper. Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa.

Protect Your Health.

Cold and moisture combined have a torporizing effect upon the bodily organs and the digestive and secretive processes are apt to be more tardily performed in winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the excretory functions. The bowels are often sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therefore, requires opening up a little, and also purifying and regulating, and the safest, surest and most thorough tonic and alterative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters Persons who wish to escape the rheumatic twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bilious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of the year, will do well to reinforce their systems with this renowned vegetable stomachic and invigorant. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

Will Send for Him.

The commissioners have concluded to send a man to Allentown to see if the man their held in durance vile is the long lost John Wilson. A photograph received from the sheriff at that place bears a striking resemblance, while a letter of description answers perfectly that of Wilson. The man is an old offender in that locality and, although he now gave his name as Young, yet it is positively known that several times has he figured conspicuously in the criminal courts of that place under the name of John Wilson.

A Methodist preacher hinted that it would be nice to go to Europe, as his throat trouble was getting worse but the good deacons sent for a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and consequently now enjoy a good sermon.

Cleaning the Streets.

Street Commissioner Thomas Shaughensey and a gang of men are busy cleaning up the streets. And it must be said that they are doing the work thoroughly and well. The streets of Bellefonte have not presented such a good appearance for one year as they do now.

Mr. Robert Jackson, of Osceola, and Andrew Charles Jackson, of State College, the two eldest sons of Robert Jackson, of East Linn street, spent Easter Sunday at the home of their parents.
